

FIRE AND OTHER HAZARDS FOUND IN 31 SCHOOLS

Alarm and Safety Facilities Lacking in Large Degree, Survey Shows—Exits, Stairs Inadequate in Some Buildings.

REASONABLY SAFE, GERLING ASSERTS

Superintendent Says He Doubts Top-Floor Assemblies Are Dangerous, Although He Disapproves of Them.

Study of the recent public school survey report on physical condition of schoolhouses has disclosed hazards from fire and other conditions in 31 schools.

While the report said "practically all" school buildings were planned with due regard to safety, it added: "It is questionable whether the buildings should lack, as they do in such large degree, facilities for fire alarm and fire safety."

Inclusion of fireproof stairwells in older buildings, largely antedating 1900, has been well done, the report continued, but it pointed out that portions of some structures are not fire-resistant.

Gerling's Comments.

Newer buildings, erected in the last 35 years, are fireproof, Superintendent of Instruction Henry J. Gerling said to a Post-Dispatch reporter. While some of the older buildings are not, the stairways, constituting the exits, were rebuilt to resist fire some years ago, on the theory that this met safety requirements, he declared.

He objected to fire-escape chutes as the ground that children might slip up in them and injure each other. It was his opinion that the schools were reasonably safe from the standpoint of fire. While he disapproves of auditoriums on top floors, as exist in several schools, he said he thought they are not hazardous.

There are neither fire escapes nor automatic devices for detecting fire in the schools. Every school, however, has a complete system of electric bells available as a fire alarm. There are no fire-alarm call boxes in the schools, telephones being the only instrumental means of summoning firemen.

Charles A. Welsh, City Building Commissioner, said he had no authority over the schools, under the law.

The term "fire resistant" as used in the survey report deals largely with use of materials tending to fireproof wood framing or protect iron or steel framing against the heat of fires, without being completely fireproof. A typical example is the use of metal lath and hard plaster around an iron beam, which would retard the collapsing effect of fire in contrast with the fireproofing of concrete.

Beaumont High Stairs.

As to Beaumont High School, the report raised the question of whether the stairways in such a building should be on the outside, rather than the interior. It went on:

"Occupants of this building reaching a stairwell on an upper floor should be assured of being able to get directly out of doors after descending, rather than of having to enter another corridor on a basement level at a point which is rather remote from an outside exit. Frequent fire drills in a building of this kind are absolute essentials in order to develop habits of rapid passage when the danger gong sounds. It is recognized that fires have never gained much headway in this type of school construction, but the administration should provide against any emergency."

Blawett High Auditorium.

The top-floor assembly room of Blawett High, seating 500 persons, was criticised, with this statement: "No school should endeavor to assemble its largest group on the top floor, thus adding greatly to the difficulty of access as well as exit. There are hazards and hard passages in this auditorium which make the maintenance of the space for assembly purposes undesirable. Exits from the assembly room at the time of the survey were blocked by orchestra stands, a phonograph cabinet and other material. The school should prohibit any storage in these passageways. Frequent fire drills should be emphasized."

More doors leading to the McKinley High auditorium were urged, to eliminate a "funnel" condition, and it was pointed out there was no outer-periphery staircase from the auditorium. Roosevelt High also lacks stairways on the outer periphery.

HORSES PUT BACK INTO SERVICE TO AVOID TRUCK FEES

Ward S. Mack, Using Two Teams in Hauling Across Bridge

Two teams of horses previously used for miscellaneous work by the Ward & Mack Transfer Co., are being used for hauling freight to evade the Missouri truck law requiring permits from the Missouri Public Service Commission, it was learned today.

The teams and wagons, it was explained by Harry J. Lanis, vice-president, are not subject to the law governing trucks and have been kept busy carrying merchandise from East St. Louis railroad warehouse to the company's warehouse at 1015 North Eighth street.

Like the Columbia Terminals Co., which has been classed as a common carrier by the Public Service Commission, and therefore held liable for the tax of $25 to $500 a year from each of its trucks, the Ward & Mack Co. transfers freight across the Mississippi River under contract with the railroad.

CHAMBERLAIN REJECTS PLAN TO HOLD PARLIAMENT ON JOB

Turns Down Idea for Guarding Foreign Policy; Poland Given $7,400,000 in Credits

LONDON, July 25 (AP).—Geoffrey L. Mander, opposition Liberal, proposed in the House of Commons today that Parliament meet once weekly during the recess which is to start Aug. 4, as a "watch dog" over British foreign policy, but Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain said he could not consider such a step.

"In view of the very genuine anxiety throughout the country as to what may happen during the next two months and the desirability of keeping Parliament in touch with the situation, can he (Chamberlain) say what alternative proposal he has?" Mander then asked.

"Will he consider a meeting once a fortnight?"

Chamberlain did not reply.

Sir John Simon, Chancellor of the Exchequer, from his chair, said he agreed to give Poland credits of $7,400,000 (about $7,400,000) but that the two countries had not reached an agreement on a British cash loan to Poland.

The loan under discussion was understood to be for $5,000,000 (about $5,000,000), to be provided by the British and French Governments.

GRAND JURY ALLOWED TO SEE DISPUTED ANNENBERG RECORDS

Court Rules Papers About Wills and Family Trusts Are Not Privileged

CHICAGO, July 25 (AP).—United States District Judge James H. Wilkerson ruled yesterday the grand jury considering the income tax case against M. L. (Moe) Annenberg, wealthy publisher, was entitled to examine certain documents which Annenberg's attorneys said were privileged communications. The lawyers had refused to surrender the papers, which relate mainly to wills and family trusts.

Judge Wilkerson upheld the United States District Attorney's contention that the papers were not privileged, especially since internal revenue agents already had perused them, and they had been referred to and detailed in conferences between Annenberg's lawyers and the United States Attorney General. Annenberg is publisher of the Philadelphia Inquirer and the Daily Racing Form.

WOMAN'S DEATH LAID TO DIET OF LOLLYPOPS AND LEMONADE

East Orange (N. J.) Resident Ate No Solid Food in 10 Years, Says Doctor

EAST ORANGE, N. J., July 25 (AP).—Linnea Fransson, 29 years old, who lived on lollipops, ginger ale, lemonade and water for 10 years, died of what Dr. G. P. Oxlin, county medical examiner, described yesterday as chronic malnutrition.

"Miss Fransson was a victim of major hysteria," Dr. Oxlin said. "She was operated on when she was 19 for chronic appendicitis and the idea she couldn't eat certain things and didn't eat them. The autopsy I performed showed no reason for starvation. Her condition was perfect, but she just wouldn't eat."

Miss Fransson ate no solid food since 1929 and weighed 66 pounds when she died.

$40,000 HOLDUP LAID TO REDS AT BRIDGES HEARING

Policeman Testifies He Heard Communists 'Engineered' Robbery to Replenish Party Funds.

SAYS THEY CONDONE PROPERTY SEIZURE

Not Crime if It Does Not Harm Standing With Labor, His Version of Their Teaching.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 25 (AP).—Testimony that members of the Communist party "engineered" a $40,000 holdup of a bank messenger in San Francisco to replenish party funds was given at the Harry Bridges deportation hearing today.

After Merriell R. Bacon, Portland (Ore.) policeman, testified regarding a "holdup," Trial Examiner James Landis asked:

"Do I understand that you were informed one of the party's tactics was to replenish its funds by the commission of crime?"

Bacon answered "yes." He testified:

"This information was communicated to me when I was a member of the party" by persons "of high authority in the party." He said the party taught it was not wrong to seize property and money if it could be done "without harming the standing of the party in the labor organizations in which it was working." He testified he was informed of the "holdup" in Portland. He gave no other details.

BRIDGES ABSENT; NOT WELL

The hearing today proceeded in Bridges' absence. His attorneys said he was "not feeling well."

Bacon previously testified Communists plan a revolution in which party members would "use a rifle and fight in the streets."

Government attorneys called him an "expert" to prove Communists advocate forcible overthrow of the American Government. This is an essential part of the Government case against Bridges. Bridges is charged with being a Communist and thus a member of an organization advocating violent overthrow of the Government.

Bacon testified that in 1930, on instructions from his chief, he joined the Communist party in Portland. He said he found Communists were told that "the revolution will be fought with bullets, not ballots."

"It is taught," Bacon testified, "that the ruling class will not give up without a struggle and it therefore must be armed conflict."

The policeman quoted from books, saying, "You have to use a rifle and fight in the streets."

Forced to Quit Party.

Bacon declared his identity was disclosed from his chief, and he resigned from the party a year after his enrollment. He said, however, that as a member of the Portland special anti-radical detail he received reports from police agents in the party.

Bacon delivered a speech he said was delivered at a Communist meeting in Portland by Paul Cline of Los Angeles, who Bacon said was a highly placed Communist.

"We want new members," the witness quoted Cline, "but they must be Communists; that is, they must, upon demand, give up Saturday, Sunday, Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday; that they must follow the decisions of the party, and that the revolution will be fought with bullets, not ballots."

GLASS QUITS REST OF SESSION

Senator Goes Home, Paired Against "That Spending-Lending Thing."

WASHINGTON, July 25 (AP).—Senator Carter Glass (Dem.), Virginia, quit the sultry national capital for the summer today with the tart observation that Congress should have adjourned "some time ago."

"I'd like to stay here and vote against that spending-lending thing," the Virginia senator said as he departed for home. "I voted against it in committee and I've paired against it." Glass, eldest Senator at 81, lives at Lynchburg.

GOAT BUTTS ROOSEVELT CHILD

Elliott's Daughter in Hospital With "Very Slight Concussion."

PORT WORTH, Tex., July 25 (AP).—Butted by a goat, Ruth Chandler Roosevelt, 5-year-old granddaughter of President Roosevelt, was treated in a hospital today for "a very slight concussion."

Physicians said the child's chest also was bruised by the goat which butted her while she was playing at the country home of her mother, Mrs. Elliott Roosevelt, spent last night at the hospital. She expected to take her daughter to her ranch home today.

SENATE COMMITTEE APPROVES HOLC MORTGAGE EXTENSION

Banking Group Would Lengthen Repayment Time From 15 to 25 Years.

WASHINGTON, July 25 (AP).—An extension from 15 to 25 years for repayment of mortgages to the Home Owners' Loan Corporation was recommended today by the Senate Banking Committee, favorably on a bill by Senator Mendel (Dem.), New York, authorizing the 10-year extension.

CLERK THUMBS WAY HOME TO GIVE UP ON $700 THEFT CHARGE

Hitch-Hikes From Mexico After New York Suburb Refuses to Pay Fare.

MINEOLA, N. Y., July 25 (AP).—Edward C. Ray, 30 years old, bookkeeper who came here from Mexico City to face charges of stealing $700 from a real estate firm's payroll, was held in jail today on a grand larceny warrant. He disappeared March 23 and was indicted a week later.

Ray tried twice to surrender to police in Mexico City and Laredo, Tex., but they released him after county officials here telegraphed they could not raise the $100 necessary to bring him back.

Unable to rest, Ray thumbed his way across country, stopping to confer with his wife in Wisconsin. Assistant District Attorney Albert M. Demos said he admitted stealing the money.

Police said the bookkeeper told them he had been offered half a dozen jobs since leaving Texas but that "I had to get this thing off my mind. I couldn't stand it."

PRESIDENT BACK IN CAPITAL TO PRESS FOR LENDING BILL

Summons Majority Leaders of Congress to Report Today on Legislative Conditions.

WASHINGTON, July 25 (AP).—President Roosevelt came back to Washington by special train today to check up on the administration's $2,400,000,000 lending bill and the progress Congress is making toward adjournment.

Before leaving his home at Hyde Park, N. Y., last night, the president called on the congressional majority leaders, Senator Barkley (Dem.), Kentucky, and Representative Rayburn (Dem.), Texas, to call at the White House today and report on legislative conditions.

The President hoped they could tell him the lending bill would be out of the way and the legislators ready to call it quits for the session by the end of next week. He had worked out a schedule calling for his return to Hyde Park immediately after adjournment, acting there on bills passed in the usual last-minute rush, and then a cool week's cruise off the New England and Canadian coasts.

BRITISH LORD URGES ACTION TOWARD WAR DEBT SOLUTION

Tells Peers He Hopes New Envoy to U. S. Will Make "Progress in This Grave Matter."

LONDON, July 25 (AP).—Lord Samuel, former Home Secretary and High Commissioner to Palestine, told the House of Lords today he hoped that Lord Lothian, Ambassador-Designate to the United States, would make "some progress toward solution of this grave matter."—Britain's war debts to the United States.

Lord Samuel hoped for such action, "firstly because it (the debt question) concerns our financial credit with the United States and with other countries, which may be of great moment should there be war; secondly, because it has strong political bearing on opinion in America, which also is a matter of perhaps even greater moment; and most of all, because the honor of the British name is involved in our failure hitherto to fulfill obligations solemnly undertaken."

Lord Samuel spoke during debate on the annual finance bill.

After eatingy ous Goldner took off in grimy clothes, took a shower and shaved, all the time talking animatedly of his experiences in politics bearing on opinion in America, which also is a matter of perhaps even greater moment; and most of all, because the honor of the British name is involved in our failure hitherto to fulfill obligations solemnly undertaken."

City fiscal officials expect to receive as much as $800,000 annually from the levy of $1 per thousand cigarettes. License Collector Fred A. Renick said receipts so far are "about as expected."

KIDNAPED PASTOR FREED BY ARABS AFTER 7 DAYS

The Rev. Gerould P. Goldner, American, Returns to Jerusalem in Exhausted Condition.

RANSOM OF $2500 IS PAID TO BAND

Abductors Demanded $5000 When He and Father Were Seized on Trip to Monastery.

JERUSALEM, July 25 (AP).—The Rev. Gerould Goldner was returned safely to the arms of his father, Dr. Jacob Goldner, late today after payment of $2500 ransom to a gang of Arab kidnapers.

The return of the young Mogadore (Ohio) pastor ended an ordeal for his aged father, the Rev. Jacob Goldner of Cleveland, who broke down during the protracted negotiations which brought alternative hopes and fears for his son's safety.

The younger Goldner had been in the hands of a band of Arab kidnapers since July 18, when he and his father were seized on a trip to visit a Greek monastery at Mar Saba on the Dead Sea.

The father was freed the next day and sent into Jerusalem with the kidnapers' demand for $5000 ransom.

FATHER AND SON WEEK.

On reaching Jerusalem young Goldner threw his arms around his father and both wept for joy.

As soon as the son regained his composure he related that he left the gangs latest hiding place near Hebron early this afternoon.

Somewhere between Bethlehem and Hebron a district commissioner saw him dressed in clothing provided by the Arab kidnapers, riding on a donkey. He was quickly transferred from the donkey to the commissioner's automobile and taken to Jerusalem.

His father rushed him up the backstairs of the Jerusalem Y. M. C. A. to a room, where he was given warm food. He had been upset by the food provided by his captors.

JAPAN TO CLOSE RIVER AT CANTON TO THIRD POWERS

U. S. and Others Notified Two Weeks' Blockade Will Be Clamped on for 'Military Reasons.'

RESTRICTIONS ON CONCESSIONS LIKELY

Sentries to Search Persons Entering British and French Areas Similar to Practice at Tientsin.

HONGKONG, July 25 (AP).—The Japanese Consul at Canton has notified consular authorities of other nations, including the United States, that for "military reasons" the Japanese Navy will close the Canton River for two weeks starting at midnight tomorrow.

The move was reliably reported in this British crown colony to be in the nature of a blockade to cut shipping between Hongkong and Canton and in conjunction with this measure, it was said, the Japanese planned a blockade of British and French concessions on Canton's Shumsham Island.

It was reported that Japanese sentries would be posted at both bridge entrances to Shumsham, where the United States consulate and American business houses also are situated.

Sentries to Search All Persons.

The Shumsham sentries, it was disclosed, will search all persons entering or leaving the island—a practice similar to that followed in the Japanese blockade of the British and French concessions at Tientsin, started July 14.

Officially, foreign quarters at Canton were unaware of plans to blockade Shumsham.

Most foreigners believed closing of the Canton River to third power shipping was designed to facilitate troop movements, either for operations of a larger scale in the Canton area or for the transfer of troops for action elsewhere on the Chinese mainland coast.

A United States gunboat, sailing from Hongkong about 60 miles up the Canton estuary tomorrow, to reach the South China metropolis before the river closing goes into effect.

Dispatches from Chungking told of an air raid on that Chinese capital last evening and of an address by Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek before a Kuomintang (Government party) assembly in which he declared that a "Far Eastern Munich" was unthinkable.

The Generalissimo spoke before receipt of news of British Prime Minister Chamberlain's statement acknowledging Japanese right-of-way in occupied sections of China.

"Old Watchdog Now a Mad Dog."

He said, "Britain well knows that Japan is no longer her Far Eastern watchdog of 25 years ago but rather a mad dog turning against its former benefactor."

Chinese officials withheld official comment on the memorandum of agreement in the Japanese-Japanese conversations at Tokyo pending study of the official text.

They generally agreed that Britain was laboring under difficulties but stressed that continued foreign assistance was essential for China to carry out the war of attrition which they said it was fighting not only for itself but for all powers desiring orderly international relations.

Fewer than 30 casualties resulted from the several scores of bombs dropped by 27 Japanese warplanes in an early evening moonlight raid on Chungking and vicinity.

HONGKONG, July 25 (AP).—The captain of the 3554-ton British steamer Hatain radioed its owners tonight that it had struck a mine off the China coast which had torn a hole in its side, flooding one of its holds.

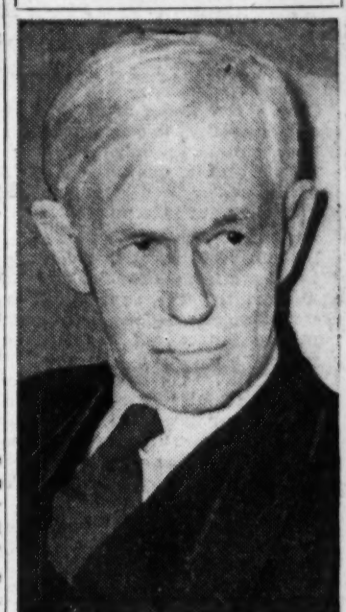

He said, however, that the Hatain was in no immediate danger, although it had had to stop its engines and anchor off the coast a little north of Swatow. Naval authorities indicated a British destroyer probably would go to its aid.

BOY LOST FOR WEEK ON MOUNTAIN FOUND

Lad, Naked and Exhausted, Had Wandered 35 Miles in Maine Wilds.

SHERMAN, Me., July 25 (AP).—Donn Fendler, 12-year-old Rye (N. Y.) Boy Scout lost on Mount Katahdin for more than a week, was found, naked and exhausted, today in woods near here.

The boy, sought in a widespread hunt since he became lost on the summit of the lofty mountain a week ago yesterday, had wandered 35 miles away from the point where he was lost.

Nelson McMoran, owner of the Munkasee sporting camps at Sherman, found the emaciated boy walking aimlessly in the thick underbrush across the Penobscot River from his camp. Weak cries attracted McMoran's attention and he immediately crossed the river in a boat. He found the boy in a wild, uninhabited section.

A doctor sent from Millinocket expressed belief the boy would recover. He gave him nourishment and put him to sleep. The boy's feet and hips were covered with sores.

U. S. HAS BOUGHT 9,000,000 ACRES OF SUBMARGINAL LAND

Spent About $46,000,000 and Retired Tracts From Cultivation, Conservation Chief Says.

WASHINGTON, July 25 (AP).—H. H. Bennett, chief of the Soil Conservation Service, said today the Government has purchased more than 9,000,000 acres of submarginal land at a cost of about $46,000,000. The land was retired from cultivation to improve agricultural conditions.

Bennett said some areas have been added to national forests and parks, others converted to wild life refuges and many leased to State conservation agencies.

LENDING MEASURE 'CHEATING DEVICE,' SAYS VANDENBERG

Senator Attacks It as Way of Beating Debt Limit, 'Another Tug at Boot-strap Lifting.'

DELAYS INDICATED IN ACTION ON BILL

Attempt to Be Made in Senate to Put Through Restoration of WPA Wage Rate as a Rider.

WASHINGTON, July 25 (AP).—Senator Vandenberg (Rep., Mich.), termed the Administration's $2,490,000 lending bill today "a device for cheating the debt limit, for socializing business, and for another tug at boot-strap lifting."

He issued a statement while the Senate leadership worked for early approval of the measure and while reports circulated that a coalition of Democrats and Republicans would try to bottle up the legislation in the House Rules Committee.

"This," said Vandenberg, "is the final spree of the spendthrifts who think they can make an $80,000,000,000 country out of a $60,000,000,000 country by borrowing the difference."

"Under the impact of universal criticism they have feverishly trimmed their bill of some of its more glaring affronts to economic sanity."

"But it is still a device for cheating the debt limit, for socializing business and for another tug at boot-strap lifting."

"Seemingly they never learn that you can't make a silk purse out of a sow's ear, and you can't build a solvent prosperity around an insolvent Treasury."

Fight Over WPA Pay Rate.
A new turn in the controversy over WPA wage scales threatened today to hamper the drive to obtain Senate approval of the lending program.

Senator Murray (Dem., Mont.), abandoned an attempt to have the Senate Appropriations Committee approve a proposal to put the WPA back on a prevailing wage basis. He announced he would seek to attach the proposal as a rider to the lending bill.

In approving a WPA appropriation bill last month, Congress adopted a provision requiring all persons on relief to work 130 hours a month for the same amount of money they had earned previously with fewer hours of work. This meant abolition of the prevailing wage for skilled workers and brought about numerous protest strikes which provoked a warning from President Roosevelt that workers could not strike against the Government.

Senator Adams (Dem., Colorado), said he thought the Senate would attach the new prevailing wage amendment to the lending bill. Senator Russell (Dem., Georgia), said most Southern Senators would oppose it in its present form. Senator McCarran (Dem., Nevada), one of the authors, said he expected administration opposition.

Gets Around Wage Revision.
It was disclosed that the amendment would circumvent a "cost of living" provision placed in the relief appropriations bill by Russell and others. This provision requires that any differential in WPA wage scales as between one section of the country and another must not be greater than the difference in the cost of living.

New England Senators have protested that this means lower wages for WPA workers in the North, because, under terms of the bill, the average wage for the country before June 30 must be maintained.

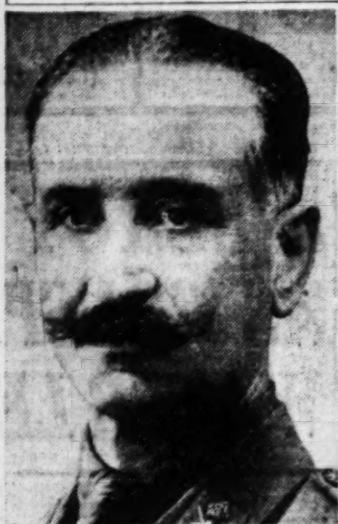

Announcing that he would support the McCarran amendment, Senator Wagner (Dem., New York), said he thought that while a controversy over the WPA wage scale might delay passage of the lending bill, he did not think it would endanger its chances of Senate approval.

Meanwhile, Representative Taber (Rep., New York), said this Congress had made "the worst" spending record in history. He urged defeat of the Administration's lending bill.

The lending measure was sidetracked temporarily in the Senate yesterday when a bill to create new Federal judgeships and to ratify a treaty with Panama provoked hours of contentious debate.

Senator Barkley of Kentucky, the Democratic leader, seeking to spur the Senate to a fast pre-adjournment pace, announced that night sessions would begin tomorrow. He urged Senators to stay on the floor so that a majority might be present to transact business.

Only a few hours after Barkley spoke, however, two calls of the Senate roll brought only 37 Senators—12 short of a quorum—to their desks. Barkley then agreed to adjournment until 11 a. m. today.

President Wants Bill Passed.
President Roosevelt, back in Washington from Hyde Park, N. Y., canvassed the legislative situation. He was represented as anxious to obtain enactment of the lending measure as well as a bill to double the $800,000,000 borrowing power of the United States Housing Authority before adjournment.

The latter measure ran into trouble in the House, meanwhile, when the Rules Committee pigeonholed it for the time being.

The committee heard testimony late yesterday that the leadership wanted prompt action, but adjourned without acting on a proposal to give the legislation preferred status. Representative Cox (Dem., Georgia), a frequent administration opponent, said "We may never vote."

Committee members said the failure to give the housing measure right of way might be followed by a similar move against the general lending bill. It was said authoritatively that a combination of Republicans and anti-administration Democrats might wield the committee's "veto power" against the latter measure.

The committee decides which bills shall have preference in House consideration.

Although Barkley set the middle of next week as a possible time for adjournment, yesterday's Senate speech-making indicated many of his colleagues were in no hurry to leave Washington. The Democratic leader told reporters that he hoped the Senate would pass the lending measure Wednesday night or Thursday.

Senate Republicans and Democrats critical of administration fiscal policies, however, were busy drafting amendments to curtail the lending measure still further. The Senate Banking Committee already has cut $310,000,000 from the bill.

Senator Taft (Rep., Ohio), said he probably would offer successive amendments to eliminate each section of the bill. Taft said Republicans probably would support amendments by Senator Byrd (Dem., Virginia), to limit the program to one year, instead of the proposed seven-year maximum, and to eliminate $500,000,000 of loans for highways and $350,000,000 for public works advances.

Taft said he also might attack the constitutionality of the measure on the ground that it circumvented a requirement that no money be taken from the Treasury except to meet specific congressional appropriations.

IMMIGRANT GROUP LEAVES SASKATCHEWAN FOR GERMANY

Friendly Neighbors Became Antagonistic; Refugees May Take Over Three Farms.

NEW YORK, July 25 (AP).—Fourteen immigrants returned to Germany from Canadian farms today, and the land they occupied in Canada may be taken over by refugees from Sudeten Germany.

The 14, comprising four families, sailed on the liner Bremen, disheartened at the treatment they received at Saskatchewan since German became the center of European tension.

The patriarch of the group, Hugo Schilling, related sadly: "When I went to Canada 10 years ago, everything was fine. The people were friendly. But when the newspapers began printing about the situation in Europe, the friendliness disappeared. Finally we could stand it no longer—the hate of everything German we couldn't stand. Some of our former neighbors stopped us on the street to tell us that for every Jew forced out of Germany they would hang one of us."

The farms in Canada were sold to a quasi-Government agency. Schilling said, which already has prospective buyers—refugees from Germany.

SENATE GROUP SIDETRACKS RIVERS AND HARBORS BILL

Votes to Take No Action on $407,000,000 Measure Until Next Session.

WASHINGTON, July 25 (AP).—Senator McNary (Rep., Oregon), said today the Senate Commerce Committee had voted to sidetrack the $407,000,000 omnibus Rivers and Harbors Bill until next session.

Leaving the committee room, McNary told reporters the committee did not vote on a proposal by Senator Bailey (Dem., North Carolina), to cut the project authorization to $32,961,650 and call the bill up for immediate action.

SLAPPING FRANCO'S KIN COST GEN. QUEIPO POST

France Hears This Explanation of Removal—Monarchist-Fascist Row.

HENDAYE, France (at the Spanish Frontier), July 25 (AP).—Spanish sources in Iran said today that Gen. Gonzalo Queipo de Llano was removed from his Spanish army post because he had publicly slapped Ramon Serrano Suner, Interior Minister and Generalissimo Francisco Franco's brother-in-law.

Queipo de Llano was removed from the Andalusian command last Friday.

The same sources said Foreign Minister Francisco Gomez Jordana had offered his resignation to Franco but that it had been refused.

Officials at Iran reported that Queipo de Llano had slapped the Interior Minister at Burgos last week during a political argument. The two men were said to have been involved in a quarrel which matched Falangists against Carlists and was threatening seriously Franco's military dictatorship.

The General has been a backer of the Carlists, who want a monarchy, while Serrano Suner has supported claims of the Falangists, or Spanish Fascists.

Iran officials said they could not explain the removal of Gen. Juan Yague from command of the Moroccan Army Corps last week. They said that so far as was known both Generals were still in Spain.

Other reports said a Falangist Sergeant who shot and killed a Carlist because the latter cried, "Long live the King," had been executed at Iran.

The Sergeant was arrested by military police immediately after the street shooting early this month. The shooting started a series of clashes between the Falangists and Carlists, forcing authorities to augment military forces in the provinces of Navarra and Guipuzcoa.

Franco Reorganizes Army, Provides Military Governors for Cities.
MADRID, July 25 (AP).—A decree reorganizing Gen. Franco's army into eight units of from two to four divisions each with a district military governor in charge of each unit was announced last night.

The old army corps which served during the civil war will thus be dissolved as soon as the new military districts can be organized.

Observers significantly noted that in Barcelona, Madrid, Seville, Cadix, Cartagena and Ferrol—the most important ports in the mainland—military governors will be appointed by the Army Chief of Staff.

The decree also announced that more troops would be granted home leave in accordance with the demobilization gradually being carried out.

Under the new setup Spain will have an army of at least twice as many soldiers as before the war (Spain had about 150,000 soldiers in 1935) and more than 1,000,000 trained men ready to step into the front line in case of emergency.

In addition, thousands of youths not of military age are being trained in both gymnastic and semi-military exercises in Falangist (Fascist) militia.

JAPANESE LAUNCH NEW OFFENSIVE ON MONGOL FRONTIER

Close-Range Fighting Reported, With Air Battles, Artillery, Machine-Gun and Rifle Fire.

TOKYO, July 25 (AP).—Close-range fighting was reported renewed today along the border between Outer Mongolia and Manchoukou as the Japanese launched their second offensive in two days in an attempt to dislodge Soviet Russian-supported Mongol forces from a foothold on the east bank of the Khalka River.

Domei, the Japanese news agency, said a land attack was accompanied by aerial fighting and followed by a long artillery battle. Rifle and machine-gun fire indicated steady trend on the Japanese side, on a slope leading to the Khalka's east bank.

The Japanese army issued at Hsinking, capital of Manchoukou, a communique stating that 58 Soviet planes had been shot down in the air fight over Nomonhan Hill, and that one Japanese craft was missing. The communique said 160 Soviet planes were in the first battle and 70 in the last two.

Soviet Warning to Japan: 'Fleet Fully Prepared.'
MOSCOW, July 25 (AP).—A warning to Japan by Soviet Russia's naval commissar coupled with his declaration that Russia "possesses more submarines than any other country in the world" was published today.

"Moreover, we possess considerably more submarines than even Japan and Germany taken together," asserted Admiral Nikolai Kuznetsov.

"The Soviet Union is a naval power," he said. "The Soviet Navy is becoming powerful."

He indicated strongly that Russia was increasing its seapower with Japan in view.

"We know that some restless neighbors may in the Far East require lessons from our armed forces in order to realize that our frontiers are inviolable and that we will not allow anybody to infringe them," Kuznetsov said.

"In view especially of the restless temper of our neighbor, the Pacific fleet must be especially vigilant and is fully prepared to defend the Fatherland."

100 Warships in Pacific.
"The Pacific fleet is a vivid manifestation of the growth of our Navy as a whole. Our first warship appeared in the Far East some five or six years ago. It was the first submarine. Today the number of surface warships and submarines in the Pacific fleet already has exceeded 100, without counting small ships like torpedo boats."

The navy commissar's speech, delivered yesterday at a meeting of 20,000 representatives of Moscow public bodies, was published today by Tass, the official news agency.

Russia rejected last night a Japanese memorandum of April 27, which alleged obstructionist tactics against Japanese oil and coal concessions in the Northern half of Sakhalin Island and in turn complained of a long list of violations of concession contracts and laws by the Japanese.

Tass, official news agency, said the Assistant Commissar of Foreign Affairs, S. A. Lovosky, presented to Japanese Ambassador Shigenori Togo a memorandum which declared:

"The People's Commissariat of Foreign Affairs denies the existence of any foundation for the statements of the Japanese Government which acts as the defender of unlawful actions of Japanese concession owners."

'Malicious Fabrications.'
"Successful activities of the Japanese concessions in Northern Sakhalin are fully possible if they exactly observe the concession contracts," said the memorandum, which added that "rumors circulated"

THREE U. S. ALTITUDE RECORDS WITH LOADS SET BY BOMBER

One Machine, Carrying 11,023 Pounds, Ascended 23,800 Feet; World Mark, 30,551.

WASHINGTON, July 25 (AP).—A flying fortress bomber of the United States Army set three American records for altitude flying with various loads last Saturday, the War Department announced yesterday.

The feats were performed at Langley Field, Va. The barographs, now being calibrated, indicate that a height of 23,800 feet was reached with a load of 11,023 pounds.

No record for this feat had been set in the United States before. The international record, 30,551 feet, was established by a Junkers plane at Dessau, Germany, the National Aeronautic Association said.

Subject to final calibration, the readings indicated national records were broken with loads of 2000 and 1000 kilograms but the new figures were not made public. A kilogram is about 2.2 pounds.

The 2000-kilogram record of 6722 feet was established at Wright Field, Dayton, O., Oct. 25, 1923, by Lieut. H. R. Harris, of the Army Air Corps in a Bunting Bomber.

The new record for the 1000 kilogram load exceeded the previous national record of 2820 feet made at Los Angeles July 26, 1929, by Waldo Waterman in a Bach plane.

The crew of the Flying Fortress, a standard plane, was composed of Lieutenant-Colonel Robert Olds, Lieut. Robin Ping, Corporal Joseph H. Walsh and Private Archie Jesper.

ed by the Japanese side to the effect that the U. S. R. R. strives to abolish the activities of Japanese concessions in Northern Sakhalin are malicious fabrications."

Sakhalin, 600-mile-long island north of Japan is half Russian, half Japanese. The dispute over Japanese oil and coal concessions in the Russian, or Northern, half became acute July 21, when a Japanese Naval Ministry source disclosed that part of the Japanese fleet was assembling in Northern waters as a result of a Soviet threat to confiscate the Japanese concessions.

The dispute, according to Japanese sources, grew out of a Soviet court decision levying fines amounting to 700,000 yen (about $190,000), on Japanese companies for alleged non-compliance with Soviet regulations. When the fines were not paid confiscation was threatened.

A protest in the dispute was registered in Moscow on July 4. On July 17, Moscow announced that a Tokyo demand for an answer by July 18 had been rejected without consideration because it bore the character of an ultimatum.

Japanese Report Shooting Down Forty-One Soviet Planes.
TOKYO, July 25 (AP).—The Japanese army headquarters at Hsinking, Manchoukou announced today that Japanese airmen had brought down 41 Soviet planes in a battle over Outer Mongolia and Manchoukou, an border.

Further Secrecy Imposed on U. S. Diplomatic Files Back to 1918

State Department Bars Researchers From Confidential Records to Prevent Possibility of Stirring Up Hostilities Abroad.

WASHINGTON, July 25 (AP).—While J. Edgar Hoover moved to combat a marked increase in international espionage by setting up field offices in Alaska, Hawaii and Puerto Rico, it was disclosed today that the State Department has tightened the secrecy around its files.

An order just issued by the State Department says that "in view of the contemporary international situation, it will not be possible to release the confidential or unpublished files and records of the department, of a date later than Dec. 31, 1918, available to persons who are not officials of the United States Government."

Until now, the files up to and including this year were open to a limited number of persons such as professors, students and international lawyers under certain conditions.

Action in Interest of Peace.
But officials say that with many foreign nations hostile or suspicious toward each other, material from the files might be used to inflame further damage on international armistice. Hence the order.

The date of demarcation—Dec. 31, 1918—is significant because it marks the close of the World War military period and the beginning of the peace conference, reconstruction and post-war era.

Even for officials there are certain restrictions. "The use of these records by Government officials will be subject to such conditions as the chiefs of the appropriate policy divisions in the Department of State may deem it advisable to prescribe."

There also are many restrictions even for consultation of the records prior to 1918. Permission is limited to persons such as lawyers, publicists, historians, instructors and professors in accredited colleges and universities who have an "important and definite use for the information desired."

An application must be accompanied by a recommendation from the embassy or legation of his country.

Limitations on Pre-1918 Files.
Such privileged persons may, however, be refused access to some of the files prior to 1918 if the foreign governments mentioned in them do not agree to their perusal, or if the State Department policy division chiefs deem it inadvisable. The policy chiefs also decide whether the inquirer shall only read the documents laid before him or whether he may take notes or make copies of them and whether he may publish anything about them. If notes or copies are made, these must be left with the State Department and will be referred to the chief of the policy division concerned, who will have discretion whether to give them back to the inquirer or to retain them and refuse him permission to use them. The State Department makes one concession in saying: "The provisions of this order are to be interpreted as liberally as possible. In this regard it is to be borne in mind that the further it is possible to go in the way of promoting legitimate historical research and the study of the foreign policy of the United States without violating the confidences necessary for the transaction of diplomatic affairs, the more likely the department will be to receive the support and trust of the intelligent public."

Secrecy in Other Departments.
The State Department's actions follows a course adopted by other departments. The navy has become more restrictive in giving out information on the armaments program. It will not say, for example, how far construction on new battleships has advanced.

Meanwhile, an announcement from the Justice Department disclosed that Hoover, the chief of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, is reopening the field divisions in Alaska, Hawaii and Puerto Rico which were closed in May, 1938, because of a deficiency in the Bureau's appropriation.

BRITAIN SPEEDS BILL TO CRUSH IRISH TERRORISM

Lightning Drive Planned to Thwart Republican Army Sabotage — 5000 Persons Watched.

OFFERS PROTECTION TO ANY WITNESSES

Gives Assurance, but Not Promise of Immunity, to Bruns After Apparent Attempt on Life.

Prosecuting Attorney Stanley Wallach of St. Louis County, continuing his study of all information developed recently by the Post-Dispatch in connection with the unsolved murder of George J. Appleton nearly three years ago, went to Waterloo, Ill., today to talk with former Sheriff A. C. Leary of Monroe County, Chief Deputy Sheriff Arnold J. Willmann accompanied him.

As was told exclusively in the Post-Dispatch, Ludwig, now an automobile dealer at Waterloo, said that a month before Appleton was found shot to death, in October, 1936, a self-styled "investigator" offered him $2500 to take part in the murder of a man at a Union Electric transmission tower in Monroe County, and make it appear that a bomber had been caught.

Wallach expects to obtain a detailed account of the plan outlined to Ludwig by the investigator, who was known to the former Sheriff as "George." Ludwig has explained that in rejecting the offer and ordering "George" to get out of Monroe County he did not arrest the man because there were no witnesses to the conversation and he did not see how the man could be convicted of any crime.

Within a month Appleton was found murdered beside a transmission tower near Florissant. There was a dynamite bomb beside the body, but no matches to light the fuse and the absence of signs of a struggle led police to believe he had been killed by someone he knew.

After learning of an apparent attempt, to assassinate George Bruns, ex-convict and an important witness in the Appleton case, in Granite City last Thursday Prosecuting Attorney Wallach today ordered St. Louis police to look for Bruns, or any other witness in the investigation. "This is not an offer of immunity to anyone, but an assurance that Bruns, or any one else connected with the case, will be given adequate protection," Wallach said.

Three men, who were watching Bruns' flat from a parked automobile last Thursday afternoon, sped away when a police car approached and threw two loaded pistols out of the car. The officers, in the scout car, who were forced to give up the chase when their automobile developed carburetor trouble, said the other machine had Missouri license tags, which were being

Lightning Drive Planned to Thwart Republican Army Sabotage — 5000
Persons Watched.

LONDON, July 25 (AP).—Great Britain was set today for a lightning drive to thwart any Irish Republican Army sabotage and terrorism with official disclosure that 5000 suspects were under day and night surveillance.

Official sources said the suspects were being watched by Scotland Yard and military intelligence service men. They also said there would be an immediate roundup on enactment of a Government emergency bill designed to crush the outlawed I. R. A.

Quick raids on homes of known I. R. A. members and sympathizers would be made under extraordinary powers granted by the measure, it was said, and many might be deported forthwith.

The bill moved toward final passage before Parliament's scheduled adjournment Aug. 4 after a personal appeal by Home Secretary Sir Samuel Hoare who declared I. R. A. terrorism was "stimulated by foreign organizations" and timed to coincide with international crises.

The bill was passed on second reading last night and advanced to third reading by lawmakers who had heard Hoare outline a document called "Plan S." It was under this plan, he asserted, that I. R. A. terrorists were operating.

He hinted it might have been worked out by the staff of some foreign Power. It called for blacking of Parliament buildings, wrecking key industries and polluting water supplies.

Meanwhile, reports that R. S. Hudson, secretary for overseas trade, might be forced to resign were still being Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain's public exoneration of him in the House of Commons yesterday.

The London Times, which often mirrors Government opinion, said nothing Hudson had advanced "was in the least degree inconsistent with national policy as all schools of thought now understand it."

The Times added that Hudson "appears to have put forward nothing more than might be heard with universal approval from a member of any British party on any platform."

Prosecutor Goes to Talk With Ex-Sheriff Who Told of Proposal to Murder
Man as 'Bomber.'

Prosecuting Attorney Stanley Wallach of St. Louis County, continuing his study of all information developed recently by the Post-Dispatch in connection with the unsolved murder of George J. As was told exclusively in the Post-Dispatch, Ludwig, now an automobile dealer at Waterloo, said that a month before Appleton was found shot to death, in October, 1938, a self-styled "investigator" offered him $2500 to take part in the murder of a man at a Union Electric transmission tower in Monroe County, and make it appear that a bomber had been caught.

Within a month Appleton was found murdered beside a transmission tower near Waterloo. There was a dynamite bomb beside the body, but no matches to light the fuse and the absence of signs of a struggle led police to believe he had been killed by someone he knew.

After learning of an apparent attempt, to assassinate George Bruns, ex-convict and an important witness in the Appleton case, in Granite City last Thursday, Prosecuting Attorney Wallach today made an offer of protection to Bruns and any other witnesses in the investigation. "This is not an offer of immunity to anyone, but an assurance that Bruns, or any one else connected with the case, who believes he is in danger, will be given adequate protection," Wallach said.

Three men, who were watching Bruns' flight from a parked automobile last Thursday afternoon, sped away when a police car approached and threw two loaded pistols out of the car. The officers in the scout car, who were forced to give up the chase when their automobile developed carburetor trouble, said the other machine had Missouri license tags, which were bent to obscure the numbers. Police in East St. Louis and St. Louis are attempting to trace the pistols.

Bruns is an important figure in the Appleton investigation because he was named by Frank C. Lepard, Springfield, Ill., union officer, as the man who told him a month before Appleton was killed: "There is going to be a tower bombed, and — is going to frame a union painter and kill him." Appleton, although not a union man, was working on a painting job the day he was last seen alive.

Bruns, a former service car driver, who has served two terms in the Missouri penitentiary, recently had operated a saloon in Granite City and distributed coin-operated devices in Alton for the McCall Novelty Co. of St. Louis.

Patrolman Albert Rowden of the Granite City force, who has kept a close check on Bruns for the last year, told a Post-Dispatch reporter today that Bruns has been seen in Granite City since last Friday. A woman, with whom Bruns operated the tavern at 1539 Madison avenue until it was closed six weeks ago, was in the flat the pair occupied above the tavern yesterday, but was not there today.

Rowden named Isadore Londe, convicted bomber and former Egan gangster, as a frequent visitor at the Bruns tavern. Bruns also was the intimate of "Babe" Baldwin, "Babe" Moran, and Elmer Dowling, former officers of the Bartenders' Union, Rowden said. Dowling has been sought since last fall in the attempted assassination of Lee Baker, Negro witness against Londe in a bombing trial.

MUNICIPAL AUDITORIUM DEFICIT $26,103 FOR FISCAL YEAR

Increased Number of Free Events
Responsible, Manager Darst
Says in Report.

A deficit of $26,103 in operation of the Municipal Auditorium for the fiscal year ending last April 10 was reported today by Manager James E. Darst. It was the largest deficit since operation of the building began six years ago.

The increased number of free events held is responsible for failure to meet expenses, Darst said. If the usual rental figure were credited for free events, the building would show an operating profit of $46,545, he said.

"The Auditorium Commission, as a body, believes that free use of the Auditorium for large conventions and for certain patriotic, charitable and governmental events should not be curtailed," Darst said.

"This policy is in line with recommendations of the St. Louis Chamber of Commerce and other civic bodies. However, every request for free or reduced rent is studied by the commission on its individual merits and no concession is made unless in the case of a convention bringing large numbers of visitors to the city or a patriotic or charitable event of obvious value to the community."

LABORATORY REPORTS SCHOOL TILE IS NOT AS SPECIFIED

Supports Officials' View That Material Is Different in Color and Dimensions.

The report of a testing laboratory, confirming the position of school officials that corridor walling tile being installed in the new Mallinckrodt School does not conform to specifications, was received yesterday by the Board of Education Building Committee.

John A. Fleischli, chairman, said to a Post-Dispatch reporter that the committee took no action, regarding the matter as one to be settled between Joseph P. Sullivan, in charge of the board's PWA construction work, and Fleischer-Seeger Construction Co., contractors. The report, Fleischli said, showed the tile did not meet specifications in regard to color and shade variations and dimensions.

The committee asked for a special meeting of the board, to be held tomorrow, to consider allotment of about $2000 to pay for overtime work on installation of a new boiler at Sumner High School. The contractor has until Sept. 25 to complete the work, but the committee desires to have the installation finished before the opening of school, Sept. 5.

'For My Wife and Children, I Don't Want Them to Starve,' He Tells Proprietor.

Harry C. Praechter, proprietor of a tavern at 1825 South Fourteenth street, was conversing with the only customer in the place just before closing time last night when a stranger entered, drew a revolver and ordered Praechter, behind the bar, to hand over $7.

"That's all I want," the man said. "I don't want them to starve."

Praechter, former State Representative, took $7 from the cash register and handed it to the man, who ran out the front door. There was more money in the register.

RELIEF CENTER GIVES FOOD TO 1240 FAMILIES IN WEEK

E. J. Wallace, a Director, Says Agency Will Continue to Operate.

Food was distributed to 1240 families last week by Relief Center, private charitable agency at 324 South Third street. Most of the food was donated by commission merchants. E. J. Wallace, a director of the agency, said it has been decided to continue the work because no other relief organization is willing to assume the debt of Relief Center. "The relief load of the poor is growing, and the failure of the agencies supposed to take care of them, get proper funds makes the need for Relief Center greater than in the past four years," he said.

SYNAGOGUE OFFICER QUITS MEETING IN HUFF

Julius H. Funk Says He Was Insulted at Gathering of Objecting Home-Owners.

A meeting last night to discuss differences between objecting home-owners in the 5700 blocks of Waterman and De Giverville avenues and the Sherer Thilim Congregation, which has bought a building at 5722 Waterman for a synagogue and Hebrew school, struck a snag when Julius H. Funk, president of the congregation, walked out in a huff.

He walked out, he said, after one of the property owners asked whether the school would teach American principles. "I went to the meeting to try to settle things in a nice way, not to be insulted," he said today to a Post-Dispatch reporter. "If teaching the 10 Commandments is un-American then I'm un-American."

Funk added that he would discuss the matter with the congregation and that further efforts might be made to resolve the differences between the two groups.

SPANKING WIFE NOT GROUND FOR DIVORCE IN ALABAMA

State Supreme Court Rules in Case Involving Row Over a Widow.

MONTGOMERY, Ala., July 25 (AP).—An Alabama wife, the State Supreme Court has decided, may not divorce a husband merely because he gives her a spanking. Justice A. B. Foster held the husband in question spanked his wife "as he would a child" and that this was "wholly unjustified and reprehensible." The Court, however, dissolved a lower court divorce and ordered a 30-monthly separate maintenance judgment to stand.

The row, the Justice said, started about a widow living across the street.

Not a Jewish Issue.
Mrs. Arthur H. Steinberg, 5723 Waterman, who was secretary, said the home owners made it clear that the issue was not a Jewish one, but that their objections were simply on the ground that any church or school in the neighborhood would result in depreciation of property values. She said 52 owners of homes on both sides of the Waterman block and the north side of the De Giverville block, had signed a petition of protest. These represented about 90 per cent of the home owners, she said.

C. F. Osborn, 5715 Waterman, who presided at the meeting, said several of the objectors were members of the congregation.

The Sherer Thilim Synagogue and School now is at 537 De Baliviere avenue. Funk said the congregation had about 35 active members and there were about the same number of children in the school, taught by Morris Steiner. Benjamin Sarashon, he said, conducted services on important Jewish holidays.

MAN CUT IN EYE BY WOMAN HE TRIES TO PULL INTO AUTO

Murray H. Hilton May Lose Sight of Injured Organ, Physicians Say.

Murray H. Hilton, a laborer, 2867 Lemp avenue, who was cut on the left eyeball last night by a woman he accosted on the street, may lose the sight of the eye, physicians at City Hospital said today.

When he applied for treatment at the hospital Hilton said he had been cut by a woman who said she was Mrs. Stetel F. Bates of Shirley, Ark., visiting friends at 1004 Hickory, told police she had struck at him with a pocket knife when he tried to pull her into his car after asking a street direction. She identified him at the hospital, and he acknowledged her account was correct.

WASHINGTON U. TRYING TO SELL REAL ESTATE OVER AUTO CONCERN

Burdened With Such Holdings on Which Return in Recent Years Has Fallen.

Washington University, burdened with extensive real estate holdings, is trying to sell some because income from that source has declined greatly in the last 12 years. Even though the property is tax-exempt, the school would like to dispose of much of it, because too large a part of its endowment is in real estate.

The university's total endowment is $19,000,000, of which about $11,000,000 is in real estate, mortgage loans or majority stock holdings in corporations operating real estate.

The decline in income from that source has been chiefly responsible for the shrinkage in gross annual income of the university from $2,500,000 in 1927 to about $2,000,000 today. Moreover, the property is expensive to maintain.

Most of the real estate consists of commercial buildings in St. Louis and Kansas City, a few residences bought chiefly for future expansion of other university properties, rice lands in Arkansas and some timber land in Texas. Even though many places have been offered for sale, there have been few bids.

Place Offered for 10 Years.

The property was acquired chiefly through gifts or foreclosure. A $9000 residence on Long Island, given to the university in a bequest, was offered for sale for 10 years. Finally the price was reduced to $4000. There were a few nibbles but still no sale.

Because of the decline in income, improvements in the school's real estate holdings are made only when tenants demand them or when there is a possibility of renting space. Recently the school announced it would erect a building at the northeast corner of Locust street and Beaumont avenue for the General Electric Supply Corporation.

The university's principal real estate holding is Cupples Station, a freight terminus at Seventh and Spruce streets. Its value was formerly $5,000,000 but is now considerably less.

New appraisals of all the properties are being made. Heretofore when a gift of a building was made, its book value was set down as its actual worth.

Such Gifts Discouraged Now.

Gifts of that type are being discouraged now, unless adequate provision is made for maintenance. Similarly, gifts of buildings on the campus are not accepted unless maintenance costs are included. Too often in the past buildings were donated and the school found itself saddled with large expenses. It wanted the expanded facilities, but could not meet the added costs.

Not only has income from real estate declined, but also returns from stocks and bonds have fallen off greatly in recent years. A gift to the university in 1902 of railroad bonds with a par value of $53,000, which was to be kept intact until it reached $1,000,000, declined instead to a valuation of $15,370.

In its endowment funds, Washington University ranks thirtieth among the privately endowed schools. It is also thirteenth in size of faculty. Salaries paid to the faculty are not in line with the average paid by similar private institutions, Chancellor Throop has said.

Witness for Miss Antoinette Mueller Says Don Winter Told of 'Shoestring' Start.

Testimony in the suit of Miss Antoinette Mueller, asking for an accounting and appointment of a receiver for the automobile agency of Don Winter, who she described as her partner and fiancé, continued today in Circuit Judge Charles B. Williams' court.

Clyde Kibell and J. G. Neate, representing finance companies which do business with automobile concerns, testified that they had dealt with Winter and not with Miss Mueller. On one occasion, Kibell recalled, Winter made the statement that he was owner of the business in the presence of Miss Mueller, who offered no objection.

Winter was quoted by a witness yesterday as saying he had only a blue shirt and a sack of Bull Durham when he came to St. Louis and established the agency at 1403 South Twelfth boulevard eight years ago.

The witness, Walter Lonergan, former bookkeeper for the agency, was called as a witness for Miss Mueller, who contends she put up $2000 in the business and was promised an equal share of the profits. When he set up the books for 1935, Lonergan testified, he used the heading, "Antoinette Mueller, Proprietor."

When Winter was out of the city, Lonergan said, Miss Mueller was in charge. On cross-examination, he said that he did not meet Miss Mueller until about six months after he went to work at the agency. His salary, he testified, always was paid to him by Winter.

Edward Ringer, 2856 Indiana avenue, another former employee, gave a similar version of Winter's description of his assets on starting business. Winter told him, Ringer testified, that he had "a blue shirt and a sack of Bull Durham and started business on a shoestring."

Harold A. Wilson, district manager for the Hudson and Terraplane Sales Corporation, told the Court that he had investigated the financial standing of the agency and had extended credit to Winter. Testimony that Miss Mueller said she was "Don's wife" was given by Mrs. Theresa Singleton, 4040 Russell boulevard, who said she had bought three automobiles from him in recent years.

WOMAN BIBLE PEDDLER FOUND DEAD NEAR MISSOURI ROAD

Coroner Thinks She Was Murdered; Sheriff of Opinion She Leaped From Auto.

PLATE CITY, Mo., July 25 (AP).—A woman Bible peddler identified by a Social Security card as Lillian Garber Davis, Davenport, Ia., was found dead near a lonely byroad near here last night. She was 45 years old.

Coroner George Francis said she had been beaten on the head, apparently with a wrench although a sharp stone may have been used. Near the body were two cardboard boxes containing clothes and 11 new Bibles.

Sheriff George Elliott did not agree with the Coroner's theory. He said the woman may have been killed by a leap from an automobile. A farmer told officers he saw the woman enter a machine near his home. He said the car had a Kansas license.

TESTIMONY TAKEN IN DEATHS OF THREE ILLINOIS CONVICTS

Illinois Public Welfare Director Opens Independent Investigation at Chester.

SPECIAL TO THE POST-DISPATCH.
CHESTER, Ill., July 25.—Physicians and attendants at the Southern Illinois Penitentiary were questioned today by A. L. Bowen, Illinois Director of Public Welfare, in his independent investigation of the deaths of three prisoners who were in the psychiatric ward.

Bowen decided to make the inquiry after Coroner Lester G. Walker began an investigation and had two of the bodies exhumed from the prison cemetery on information which he said led him to believe the men might not have died from natural causes. In announcing his inquiry, Bowen expressed the opinion there was "nothing wrong" in the deaths.

The prisoners were Donald Riedhauser of Chicago and Samuel Taylor, Negro, of Louisville, Ky., who died last spring, and Stephen Jarosiewicz, who died last autumn. Walker said he was informed Riedhauser died of a drug and that Taylor was "slugged" by a guard. An autopsy on the exhumed body of Taylor showed he died of paresis, physicians said. The death certificate for Riedhauser gave brain hemorrhage as the cause of death.

At an inquest last September into the death of Jarosiewicz, a Coroner's jury returned a verdict of accidental death. The death certificate for Jarosiewicz gave brain hemorrhage as the cause of death. UTILITY ASKS COMMISSION TO AUTHORIZE SALE TO T V A

Tennessee Company Wants
Consumption of $78,000,000 Deal
Ordered for Aug. 15.

WASHINGTON, July 25 (AP).—Tennessee Utilities Corporation has asked the Federal Power Commission for a supplemental order authorizing consummation, as of Aug. 15, of the sale of its properties to the Tennessee Valley Authority, the cities of Nashville and Chattanooga and 34 other purchasers for $78,000,000.

The original sale agreement called for the closing of the deal by June 20 but a Congressional deadlock over enabling legislation prevented consummation at that time.

MAN SHOT TO DEATH BY WIFE IN QUARREL

She Admits Firing After Bourbon (Mo.) WPA Worker Threw Water on Her.

Harold Isenhower, 42 years old, of Bourbon, Mo., died in Veterans' Hospital last night of a bullet wound in the spine, inflicted yesterday afternoon by his wife in a family quarrel.

Deputy Sheriff Robert B. Gibson of Crawford County told the Post-Dispatch he was called to the home last night and found Isenhower shot. He said Mrs. Isenhower admitted the shooting and the argument started Sunday, when her husband struck her.

When Isenhower, a WPA worker, returned home from work late yesterday afternoon he threw a dipper of water on his wife, and she picked up a .22-caliber rifle and shot him, the deputy said. He did not learn the circumstances which started the quarrel.

The Isenhowers and their six children lived three miles east of Bourbon. Mrs. Isenhower was taken to the county jail at Steelville.

UNION DEMONSTRATIONS CONTINUE AT ARMOUR PLANT

50 Members Gather at Gates on East Side, Appeal to Workers to Join CIO Group.

The organization committee and union employees of the packing plant of Armour & Co. at National City, near East St. Louis, continued today the organizing campaign of the Industrial Union of Marine and Shipbuilding Workers of America, a CIO affiliate, with a demonstration by 50 union members at the plant gates.

As the first workers entered the plant at 5 a. m., the demonstrators urged them to join the union and, if already members, to pay up their dues in full. National City police officers and company police stood by, but did not interfere in the demonstration, which was orderly.

At 7 a. m. the demonstrators went to work in the plant themselves. Vernon Ford, member of the organizing committee of the union, stated that a similar demonstration would be held every morning during the membership campaign.

Last Friday 200 union members paraded around the plant in a similar demonstration, part of the campaign of the national union to obtain contracts covering Armour plants throughout the country. Union leaders say 1400 of the 1550 Armour employees in National City have joined the union.

COLUMBIA RULED BY STATE TO BE COMMON CARRIER

Commission Says Trucking Concern Is Not Operating as Contract Hauler as It Contends.

Columbia Terminals Co., large trucking concern at 400 South Broadway, which has obtained a United States District Court order temporarily preventing the arrest of its drivers for failure to have State permits, has been held by the Missouri Public Service Commission to be operating as a common carrier and not as a contract hauler, as asserted by the company.

A copy of the ruling, announced Saturday when the commission denied a Columbia application for an interstate permit as a contract hauler, was received here yesterday. The commission order made no mention of the pending litigation over the campaign in St. Louis for enforcement of the State truck law. It was indicated that the commission's course under the ruling, if not blocked by court action, would be to cite the company later to obtain common carrier permits and pay the special fees.

If the ruling is sustained, the company would be required to pay special common carrier fees, ranging from $25 to $500 a year on each of its 400 trucks engaged in St. Louis-East St. Louis freight hauling under contract with railroads.

Concern's Contentions.
The firm contends it has been operating since 1931 as a contract hauler under a Public Service Commission permit. Contract haulers are exempt from paying the special permit fees, but must pay a relatively small license fee. The company has estimated that the payment of common carrier fees would cost up to about $200,000 annually, with a possible reduction of about $50,000 for deductions allowed when the firm's operations in Missouri are over routes of limited mileage.

United States District Judge George H. Moore issued the temporary restraining order Saturday after a number of Columbia drivers had been arrested in the enforcement campaign. The company contended its local operations in St. Louis and suburban area, and its interstate operations between St. Louis and East St. Louis, were not subject to the jurisdiction of the commission.

The commission previously had taken the position the company was subject to permit provisions of the act as a contract hauler, both in its local and interstate operations, but had not declared it to be a common carrier.

The ruling Saturday, however, declared the Columbia company "is in fact a common carrier," and the commission made that finding the basis for its denial of the firm's application for a contract hauler permit to ship petroleum products for the Shell Petroleum Corporation between Roxana, Ill., and several Missouri points, including St. Louis. The case had been pending since last December.

In connection with this case, the company asserted its extensive business hauling freight under contract with the Terminal Railroad Association and 23 railroads entering St. Louis, was contract hauling, local in nature, and not subject to the jurisdiction of the commission.

In its ruling, the commission held that the company "cannot" qualify as a contract hauler for the reason that its principal business is not that of a contract hauler, but that a major portion of its activities are devoted to other lines of business.

"It is clearly engaged in operation as a common carrier in all the transportation service which it renders for the railroads and the Terminal Railroad Association," the commission ruled. "These latter operations are unquestionably performed in the rendition of a common carrier service in connection with that of the railroads."

The commission declared it would not be in conformity with legislative intent to permit a trucking company to operate in the dual capacity as common carrier and contract hauler, "nor would it be consistent with proper policies of regulation."

Part of Columbia's equipment is operated under lease contracts with large business firms, and some is leased to other truck companies. Testimony by company witnesses before the commission was that about 43 per cent of its operations were in hauling for the railroads and the remainder under contracts and leases.

In the injunction suit the company stated its gross revenue in 1938 was $770,467, and alleged that assessment of the common carrier fees constituted confiscation of its property without due process of law. Wade T. Childress, president of the firm, said in a statement that, through the enforcement campaign the city and State were, in effect, asking "us to waive our legal rights in return for immunity from arrest."

BENTON, ILL., MURDER INQUEST POSTPONED

Prosecutor Wants Further Inquiry Into Killing of Mrs. George Gore Sr.

BENTON, Ill., July 25 (AP)—An inquest in the death of George Gore Sr., who was shot death here early Sunday was postponed last night until next Monday at the request of State's Attorney Ren Jones. Jones said he wished to investigate further.

Funeral services for Mrs. Gore are scheduled for this afternoon. To avenge the death of the slain man, a neighbor previously had reported seeing a man run from the home a moment after hearing screams and the sound of five shots that killed the 51-year-old wife of Dr. Gore, a well-known physician.

When police sought to make copies of the prints, described as those of a running man, they reported protective covering over them had been removed and the prints obliterated.

Other clues include powder marks on a bedroom door curtain, indicating where the killer stood, the fact a .38-caliber revolver was used.

Sheriff Powell said Mrs. Gore apparently arose from bed to investigate the noise of a shattered window just as the shots were fired. Dr. Gore said he was awakened by the shots and telephoned police. He and Mrs. Gore, his former secretary, had been married about 15 years.

BOY, 6, LOST IN FOREST; 200 MEN JOIN IN HUNT

Bloodhounds Sent for to Track Child Who Followed Father Into Minnesota Woods.

LA PORTE, Minn., July 25 (AP)—A 6-year-old boy, Russell Jensen, son of an Albert Lea packing house foreman, was lost today in dense Paul Bunyan State Forest with a posse of 200 men and 60 enrolls hunting him.

The child disappeared yesterday morning after following his father, Curtis, and his uncle, the Rev. Olson of Minneapolis, to the edge of Lake Kabekona, where they went fishing. He was last seen walking along the beach and tracks led into the woods.

Residents, knowing the difficulty of searching the woods, agreed to stand the cost of bringing bloodhounds here from LaCrosse, Wis., and they were expected to arrive today.

Treacherous swamps, lack of food and mosquitoes were the principal threats to his safety.

FLYERS SEEKING ENDURANCE
RECORD NEARLY FORCED DOWN

Moody Brothers Fly From Springfield, Ill., to St. Louis During Stormy Night.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., July 25 (AP).—The Moody brothers, who are attempting to establish an endurance flight record, came within 12 feet of landing last night when a cross-current of air sent their small monoplane slipping toward the ground. At 8 a. m. today they started their forty-second hour in the air.

Hunter Moody reported by radio today he and his brother, Humphrey, flew to St. Louis during the night in an attempt to get out of a storm area but were unable to avoid completely a shaking-up.

"It took us an hour and 40 minutes to get to St. Louis, but we got back in 35 minutes," he said, "so you see we really had a southwest wind."

The brothers, who live in Decatur are seeking to surpass the world mark for light planes, 218 hours.

Mrs. Emalie Sachs Divorced.
RENO, Nev., July 25 (AP).—Walter E. Sachs, New York banker, and Mrs. Emalie Ahm Sachs, author of books, short stories and book reviews, were divorced at a private trial yesterday. District Judge Hutton granted the uncontested decree to Mrs. Sachs on grounds of cruelty. The court permitted her to adopt her pen name, Emalie Arling.

Fire Hazards, Other Dangers Found in 31 Schools

phery, it was stated. Vashon (Negro) High was said to have the same questionable features as Beaumont and Roosevelt. Better balcony exits from the third-floor auditorium of Sumner (Negro) High were called for, and the following report made on Booker T. Washington (Negro) Vocational School:

"The auditorium balconies have one-way exits which are not considered safe. It is recommended that two stair-towers be constructed, serving both of the balcony sections, so that an emergency exit can be secured in case of fire or panic."

Elementary Schools.

Statements of the report concerning elementary schools, together with the dates of erection of the buildings, follow:

Ames (1873 and 1892): "With the exception of fire resistive corridors, the remainder of the building is non-fire-resistive."

Baden (1907): "An auditorium seating 200 is located on the top

Constipation Relief

That Also

Pepsin-izes Stomach

When constipation brings on acid indigestion, stuffiness, dizziness, gas, coated tongue, sour taste, and bad breath, your stomach is probably loaded up with certain undigested food and your bowels don't move. So you need both Pepsin to help break up fast that rich undigested food in your stomach, and Laxative Senna to pull the trigger on those lazy bowels. So be sure your laxative also contains Pepsin. Take Dr. Caldwell's Laxative, because its Syrup Pepsin helps you gain that wonderful stomach comfort, while the Laxative Senna moves your bowels. Tests prove the power of Pepsin to dissolve those lumps of undigested protein food which may linger in your stomach, to cause gastric acidity and nausea. This is how Pepsinizing your stomach helps relieve it of such distress. At the same time this medicine wakes up lazy nerves and muscles in your bowels to relieve your constipation. So see how much better you feel by taking the laxative that also puts Pepsin to work on that stomach discomfort too. Even finicky children love to taste this pleasant family laxative. Buy Dr. Caldwell's Laxative-Senna with Syrup Pepsin at your druggist today!

floor, with a wood floor and wood roof. An inside stairway 37 inches wide is the only exit, with the exception of a small circular iron stair enclosed in a tower. The use of this auditorium should be forbidden for large assemblies."

Benton (1894 and 1903): "The building is in good condition structurally, although it is of a non-fire-resistive construction."

Blair (1882-95): "The stairs are badly worn and slippery."

Carondelet (1871): "The building is not fire-resistive and its interior is generally unattractive and poorly planned."

Charless (1895): "The building is not fire-resistive, although a certain amount of fireproofing has been done in the corridors."

Is Too Old for Further Use.

Chouteau (1894 and 1898): "Reconstruction has made the building partially fire-resistive, but the structure is too old to be of further use."

Dozier (1887-98): "The building is not fire-resistive, with the exception of the stairways and corridors."

Fremont (1897): "With the exception of stair-towers and corridors, the building is not fire-resistive."

Frederick (1895): "The stairs have been fireproofed."

Garfield (1936): "Although the building is of fire-resistive construction, it is felt undesirable to permit large groups to utilize an assembly room which does not have direct exits out-of-door."

Harrison (1896-1909): "The stairwells have been made fire-resistive. The concrete stairs have been worn smooth and slippery."

Howard (1894 and 1906): "The central unit is not fire-resistive. It should either be removed or made fire-resistive."

Irving (1871-1911): "Although the staircase has been made fire-resistive, the stair treads are smooth and slippery."

Third-Floor Auditorium.

Mark Twain (1911): "The auditorium on the third floor, seating 600 in folding chairs, is considered not safe. It is recommended that the use of this auditorium be discontinued for assembly."

Mount Pleasant (1900 and 1928): "The building has very little to commend it. The basement gymnasium, the outdoor play space and the non-fire-resistive condition, make this unit undesirable for further use."

Oak Hill (1907): "The auditorium on the third floor seats 300 people. It is reached by one stairway which has a minimum width of 34 inches. Because of the hazard of large assembly, where easy exit in case of fire or panic is not possible, it is felt that this space should be abandoned for further assembly purposes."

Peabody (1872 and 1899): "The corridors and stairs were reconstructed in 1922 to make them fire-resistive."

Penrose (1894-95): "There are narrow stairways with slippery treads, although the staircase is fire-resistive."

Walbridge (1922 and 1928): "The auditorium on the third floor is undesirable from the point of view of safety. The exit to outdoors from the assembly room in the basement was blocked by chairs and the panic bolt in the basement library operated with such difficulty that its use by young children was probably impossible."

Walnut Park (1908): "The auditorium under the roof should not be used for assembly purposes."

Divoll, for Negroes (1872 and 1936): "The old section is non-fire-resistive."

Jefferson, for Negroes (1872): "The concrete stairs have been worn smooth and slippery. The building is non-fire-resistive."

Stair Windows Dangerous.

Marshall, for Negroes (1900): "The window openings on the stair platforms between the first and second floors are extremely hazardous. Immediate steps should be taken to cover these openings with heavy wire grille to prevent injury to children."

Early abandonment of 26 white elementary schools, including 18 where hazards were criticised, was recommended by the surveyors, headed by Dr. George D. Strayer of Columbia University. Those on this list for abandonment, when possible, are:

Adams, Ames, Arlington, Benton, Blair, Carondelet, Charless, Chouteau, Clinton (new school being built to replace it and the Peabody), Dozier, Fremont, Grant, Gratiot, Hodgen, Howard, Irving, Longfellow, Marquette, Mount Pleasant, Peabody, Penrose, Pestalozzi, Riddick, Rock Spring, Schroeder and Washington.

Others Criticized.

In addition, the report urged abandonment of 10 out of the 18 Negro elementary schools, as follows: Banneker (new building being erected), Cottage Avenue, Crow, Delany, Dessalines, Divoll, Jefferson, L'Ouverture, Waring (new building being erected) and West Belle.

The report went into detail as to good and bad physical conditions at every schoolhouse in the city. It took up many matters of criticism, such as poor lighting, faulty ventilation, objectionable toilet arrangements, inadequate playground space, poorly planned facilities, unpleasant and unattractive features and provisions which were lacking. It also found many points to praise or approve.

Construction funds of the Board of Education have been virtually exhausted and there is no proposal for a new building bond issue. The board has been cutting its general expenditures, because current needs have been exceeding income for several years, so that the surplus of working capital has been approaching an irreducible minimum. The fund available for repair and improvement of structures has been limited by the board.

In February, 1938, the Post-Dispatch published a report in which Superintendent Gerling declared that most of the older schoolhouses did not qualify under present-day fireproofing requirements, although there probably was little danger of a serious fire hazard. He added that for the last 40 years the board had been committed to the policy of erecting fireproof schools, which, if rigorously applied, would require replacement of nearly all the older buildings. Building Commissioner George W. Sanger, in another report published at the same time, listed 47 schools more than 40 years old, as partially fireproofed third-class buildings, except two "straight third-class."

HEARING SEPT. 25 ON 9 U. S. INCOME TAX APPEALS HERE

Largest Claim Is for $9900, Against Estate of Dr. Bert P. Bebee, Who Shot Self.

Appeals by nine St. Louis individuals and corporations from decisions of the Internal Revenue Bureau involving income tax assessments have been scheduled for hearing before a member of the United States Board of Tax Appeals on Sept. 25 at the new Federal Building.

The largest amount involved is a claim by the Government for $9900 against the estate of Dr. Bert P. Bebee for taxes for 1929 to 1935 inclusive. Dr. Bebee shot and killed himself in his office at 3214 South Grand boulevard in April, 1938. The attorney for his estate contended that the Government made the "illegal conclusion" that all bank deposits are income, without ascertaining their source.

Dr. Bebee was under two felony indictments growing out of the death of two women patients after illegal operations when he killed himself. Louis E. Trisler, administrator of his estate, estimated that at times he had as much as $5,000 in a safe deposit box.

$7540 Assessment Appealed.

L. O. Schneebarger, president of the Vess Beverage Co., 2910 Locust street, has appealed a $7540 income tax assessment for 1933 and 1934. He contended the Government erred in adding $22,135 to his income from royalties supposedly due from the company. He stated that the right to receive the royalties had not then been established and that the company was in no position to pay them.

The Vess Beverage Co. appealed an alleged income tax deficiency of $9115 for 1935 and 1936 and an excess profits tax deficiency of $2200 for the same years. It contended the Government should have allowed a deduction of $26,685 in royalties paid to the late Vess Jones, founder of the company.

Claims for bad debt exemption were made by Charles Nagel, Daniel W. Kirby, Allen C. Orrick and Ethan A. H. Shepley, partners in a law firm with offices in the Security Building. The alleged tax deficiencies, all for 1933, are: Nagel, $3388; Kirby, $2254; Orrick, $939; and Shepley, $246. They contended the Government should have allowed deduction for charge-offs of outstanding accounts of the law partnership.

Appeal by Firms V. Desloge.

Firms V. Desloge, capitalist, 9800 Clayton road, Richmond Heights, appealed an alleged deficiency of $3560 for 1935. He charged the Government erred in computing the value of three insurance policies which he gave as gifts at their purchase price instead of their cash surrender value.

The estate of the late August A. Busch, president of the Anheuser-Busch Brewery, who killed himself in 1934, appealed an assessment of $3642 for 1933. It contended the Government should have allowed deduction of a $5500 bad debt.

The debt was a loan to Joseph I. Rehms, president of the Lafayette South Side Bank & Trust Co., which did not reopen after the 1933 banking holiday. The Government contended the transaction was not entered into for profit, and consequently the amount was not deductible.

Mrs. Mary B. T. Becker of Jefferson City, widow of Charles U. Becker, former Missouri Secretary of State, appealed an income tax assessment of $5121 for 1931 to 1933 inclusive. She contended she had been discharged as executrix of the estate and that all claims against it were now barred. She also said the Government had arbitrarily determined cash found in Becker's safe deposit box to be taxable income.

FISHERMAN KILLS HIMSELF IN MISSOURI RIVER CABIN

Edward Clark, Under Observation for Year, Found Shot to Death.

Edward Clark, a fisherman, shot and killed himself with a 12-gauge shotgun yesterday in his cabin, eight miles northeast of St. Charles on the Missouri River. Coronator John H. Buse of St. Charles County said no inquest would be held.

Clark, 65 years old, had been under observation as to his mental condition for more than a year. Authorities said they would disgorge a note found in the cabin, in which Clark named a man who, he said, would murder him.

ST. LOUIS LOTTERY PROMOTION LAID BEFORE U. S. JURY

Detective in Boston to Tell Federal Body About Activity of Julius E. Heitz and Julius Zweig.

Detective Chauncey Sterling of St. Louis was in Boston today to testify before a Federal grand jury about the evidence gathered here on the nationwide fake lottery racket which, Federal authorities estimate, took $20,000,000 from American citizens in the last 15 years.

Sterling was one of the police officers who aided United States postal inspectors in the arrests in March, 1938, of Julius E. Heitz, a lottery ticket salesman, and Julius Zweig, an ex-convict who had also promoted lottery sales here.

At the time of the arrest Heitz, who gave an address in the 2900 block of Victor street, said that his sales in St. Louis for the "Gold Bond Lottery" and the "Will Rogers Memorial Lottery" totaled about $80,000 a year and that he employed 65 deputy salesmen at small commissions.

Mrs. Will Rogers Testifies. Mrs. Will Rogers, widow of the humorist, was a witness before the grand jury yesterday. She was quoted as saying that she had refused permission to a Chicago man to conduct a lottery, part of the proceeds of which would go into the legitimately organized Will Rogers memorial fund.

The jury, with more than 100 members from 20 states called to testify, is investigating the whole fake lottery business, which also included sale of tickets on horse races, Treasury balance, baseball and football pools and other sporting events.

Heitz readily admitted to detectives that he was the St. Louis agent for a Chicago man named Abe Zimmerman, who was named by postal inspectors as the promoter of the "Will Rogers Lottery" and many other such enterprises. He added that he had refused to handle the Will Rogers tickets because "the lottery was a fake and I wouldn't deal in anything that isn't legitimate."

Tickets Taken From Pair. Heitz was arrested in his automobile at Grand and Lindell boulevards. In the car police found about 1000 "Gold Bond Lottery" tickets, and in his room they found several thousand more. He said he regularly left tickets at Zweig's office in the 1800 block of Pine street.

Zweig, who had just been released from a Federal reformatory, where he had served a two-year term for evasion of tax on income which the Government charged was received from the "Gold Bond Lottery," denied that he had resumed his old connections. In his office, however, police found 200 books of tickets on a Kentucky Derby lottery. Zweig gave an address in the 5700 block of Kingsbury avenue.

STARK ANSWERS AUDITOR SMITH ON CUT IN FUNDS

Governor Shows His Critic Actually Has More to Spend in Salaries Than in Last Biennium.

By a Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, July 25.—Recent complaints by State Auditor Forrest Smith, that reductions made in 1939-1940 appropriations by Gov. Lloyd C. Stark would handicap collection of State sales and income taxes, and would necessitate dismissal of 60 to 70 employees, were sharply answered today by the Governor with a showing that Smith actually would have more money for salaries for the biennium, after the cuts, than he had in the last biennial period.

"These facts," the Governor said in a letter addressed to Smith, "make it apparent that the reported dismissal of 60 or 70 employees from your department, together with announced salary reductions, cannot be attributed 'holly to appropriations allotments below previous or current expenditures.'"

Smith, who at first indicated he would answer the Governor's letter, said later he would not comment on it today.

The Governor's reply to Smith showed the appropriations released for all salaries and personnel service for the auditor's department, after all vetoes and items held up by the Governor, were $1,033,200 for the 1939-1940 period, an increase of $1,294 over the $1,010,286 Smith actually expended for like purposes during 1937 and 1938.

Net Increase $74,000.

The net increase available over expenditures during the last biennium actually is about $74,000, as the Auditor's expenditures for salaries and personnel services during 1937 and 1938 included about $41,000 expended by Smith for salaries in administering old-age assistance before this work was transferred from his department in 1937 to the State Social Security Commission.

The Governor pointed out that, in the appropriation items he released, Smith had for sales-tax administration an increase of about $88,000 for salaries in excess of what was expended in the last biennium.

"As a matter of fact," the Governor said in the letter, "an analysis shows that in the sales-tax department, personnel could actually be slightly increased. The greatest proportionate reduction appears to be necessary in the salaries paid from the appropriation to your office from highway funds."

The letter conceded, in effect, that Smith would have to make some reductions in personnel in his entire department, due to the rate at which the department expended money for salaries and personnel service during the first six months of this year. This was the period in which the 1939 Legislature was in session.

The Governor would not comment on the number that would have to be dismissed from divisions of the department other than sales tax, as shown by the analysis, saying that was a matter for the Auditor. However, it was learned the analysis indicated this number should not exceed 20.

Increase in Legislative Term. State departments, particularly those of elective State officers, frequently have increases in the number of their employees during sessions of the Legislature, as legislators often call on departments for temporary appointments of relatives and friends during such sessions.

The letter stated that out of the $1,043,200 which had been released for salaries and personnel services for 1939 and 1940, Smith's department had expended about $275,000 during the first months of this year, which, with an estimated payroll of $45,000 for July, would leave a balance of about $723,000 for the remaining 17 months of the biennium, or about $42,500 a month.

"This total monthly salary allowance of about $42,500," the Governor said, "compared with total payrolls averaging about $45,000 monthly so far in 1939, indicates that only reasonable readjustments of personnel should be necessary in order to keep salary expenditures within the limits of allotments now made."

ed a total of $1,238,200 for the State Auditor's Department for salaries and personnel service in all divisions. The Governor vetoed $140,000 and held up another $55,000 which will be released later if general revenue collections justify it.

Official relations between the Governor and Smith, author of the famous "Dear Pensioner" letter in 1937, when the old-age pension administration was taken from his department, have not been friendly. Smith's recent protest, issued while the Governor was in California, hinted darkly that sales tax and income tax collections would be hampered because work of his department would be curtailed by the appropriation cuts. Smith was "fearful" there would not be enough money for the pensioners and for relief.

Smith asserted he would have to dismiss between 60 and 70 employees and make salary reductions for others. He announced 30 field auditors handling county audits had been dropped last Saturday. Stark said today he had received no protests from taxpayers concerning his recent reductions in appropriations of the various State departments, which brought appropriations within the estimated revenues for the biennium.

BRITISH METHODIST CHURCH INDORSES BIRTH CONTROL

Conference Adopts Report Saying
Scripture Can Be Quoted on Either Side of Question.

LIVERPOOL, England, July 25 (AP).—The Methodist Conference of Great Britain condemned careless parenthood as injurious to social order last night and indorsed birth control "in the positive aim of producing the healthiest family in the healthiest possible way."

The report, called by one commentator the most frank ever made by a church on the subject, was adopted by a large majority. It said "scripture can be cited either for or against contraception" and added that "to Christian judgment" it is commendable to rear a healthy family.

Of trial marriages the report said "reason as well as religion replies that it is folly to incur any of the obligations or consequences of marriage while there is doubt about the reality of love." Sex education from early childhood was indorsed.

MIZE SCORES SLAUGHTER WITH TWO-BAGGER; COOPER AND HUBBELL ARE RIVALS

By J. Roy Stockton
SPORTSMAN'S PARK, July 25.—Ray Blades and his Cardinals, in second place after a profitable campaign on the road, opened a stand-at Sportsman's Park this afternoon, meeting the faltering Giants in the first game of a series of three. Carl Hubbell, with the unbelievable record of two victories and five defeats, was the New York pitcher, while Morton Cooper, who has won six and lost three, was on the hill for the Redbirds.

Manager Blades said that Lon
Warneke, who has been suffering with a sore arm, had about recovered and probably would pitch in the second game of the series tomorrow.

The series opener attracted a Ladies' day crowd of about 5000, in-

TRAINER PELLETIER GAINS REINSTATEMENT
EMPIRE CITY, N. Y., July 25
(AP).—Anthony Pelletieri was reinstated by the New York State Racing Commission today.

At a special meeting of the commission, it was announced that the indefinite suspension of Pelletieri, trainer for the Milldale Stable, would terminate tomorrow. Pat McCarthy, groom for Pelletieri, also is restored to good standing as of this date.

The suspensions, imposed on June 20, grew out of the Sun Plume case. A urinalysis by the commission laboratory after Sun
Plume's winning race at Belmont Park, June 5, showed the three-year-old colt to have been drugged with morphine, a narcotic.

The lifting of the suspensions of Pelletieri and McCarthy comes as a result of an intensive investigation which has been conducted by the State commission and is still continuing.

RED SOX MAKE DEAL FOR MINOR BATTARY
BOSTON, July 25 (AP).—A trade which will bring to the Boston Red Sox, Catcher George Lacey and Pitcher Herbert Hash of the Minneapolis club of the American Association next season was announced today.

The Red Sox officials said the trade involved payment of an undisclosed amount of cash and delivery of two undesignated players to Minneapolis.

Hash, a right-hander, has won 13 games and lost five during this season, up to last night, when he defeated Columbus, 3 to 1, giving but six hits. Lacey has batted .285 in 55 games.

INTERCITY AMATEUR BOOTS HERE TONIGHT
The Slaughter A. C., two-time winner of the Golden Gloves championship here, entertains a team of picked amateur boxers from Memphis at its new out-of-door arena tonight.

In the feature match, Milton
Jones, Midwestern Golden Gloves champion, meets Arthena Brown,
Tri-State middleweight titleholder.
The semifinal brings together Eddie Willard and Lynette Travis, welterweights. Besides five other team matches, there will be three junior contests.

PACT WITH PANAMA ON CANAL DEFENSE RATIFIED BY SENATE

Agreement Provides Consultation Before U. S. Takes Major Steps Against Aggression.
WASHINGTON, July 25 (AP).—The Senate ratified today a 1936 treaty with Panama requiring that the United States consult with Panama when it decides to take major steps in the face of any threat of aggression against the Panama Canal.

Action on the pact came after a two-day debate during which some Republicans contended it would weaken the United States' ability to defend the canal.

Chairman Pittman (Dem.), Nevada, of the Foreign Relations Committee argued that under the new accord this country would retain its right to take immediate armed action to protect the waterway, in case of a "great emergency," before consulting Panama.

The vote was 64 to 15, a two-thirds majority being required for ratification.

A. D. LASKER TELLS OF $250,000 LOAN TO MANTON'S AID

Testifies at Disbarment Hearing He Advanced Money at Request of American Tobacco Man.

NEW YORK, July 25 (AP).—Testifying against old-time acquaintances, Albert D. Lasker, former advertising man, told yesterday how one of them wangled a $250,000 loan from him for a business associate of Martin T. Manton, resigned United States Circuit Court Judge, convicted of accepting loans from litigants in his court.

Until lately president of the Lord & Thomas Advertising Agency, Lasker said at a hearing in United States District Court that he made the loan at the request of Paul M. Hahn, vice-president of the American Tobacco Co., who is facing disbarment proceedings with L. S. Levy, his former law partner and head of the prominent law firm of Stanchfield & Levy.

He discovered later to his embarrassment, Lasker said, that collateral for the loan, made to James J. Sullivan, was securities of the National Cellulose Corporation, a Manton-dominated company which was a "troublesome competitor" of a firm in which Lasker himself had invested $150,000.

Manton Tried to Reach Him. Furthermore, Lasker added, when he discovered that the loan had not been repaid, and when he turned it over to his lawyer, Max D. Steuer, for collection, Manton himself began beseeching him by mail and telephone for a chance to confer with him.

At the time, Manton was hearing an appeal in a $10,000,000 suit against the American Tobacco Co., of which Hahn was an officer and from which Lasker's firm received $2,800,000 in commissions in a single year. A decision favorable to the company was returned later.

Lasker produced a letter which Manton wrote to him in Miami, Fla., on Jan. 22, 1936, saying in part, "I tried to see you when you were in New York. I desire to see you at an early date. If you are not returning to New York, I can come to Florida at an early date."

Disbarment proceedings against Levy and Hahn, both outstanding attorneys, were instituted by United States Attorney John T. Cahill, who obtained the conviction from which Manton is appealing—a two-year sentence and $10,000 fine.

Lasker testified that in 1931 Levy requested him to lend $150,000 to minor American Tobacco Co. officers who needed it to meet bank loans. "We were glad to do it," Lasker added.

Loan Has Not Been Paid. Later in 1931, Lasker said, Hahn told him that "an identical situation has arisen, but this time it's $250,000. Can you accommodate us?" The loan was made to Sullivan, Lasker said, and has not been repaid. The Government charges Manton got $230,000 of the loan.

Before the Federal grand jury, Cahill said in his opening speech, Levy swore that he participated in the loan negotiations only as a messenger.

However, the United States Attorney said he had found a letter from Sullivan to Levy showing that Levy, alleged to have had an indirect financial interest in the National Cellulose Corporation, "was endeavoring to place this loan."

RED STOCKINGS ON MURDERED GIRL LED TO MAN'S ARREST

Police Say Golf Course Employee Was One of Few Who Knew She Wore Them.

ATTICA, Ind., July 25 (AP).—State police disclosed today the red stockings worn by Elizabeth Debrucker, murdered 11-year-old school girl, provided the clue that led to the arrest of Thomas Boyce, 26, who, officers said, confessed killing the girl.

However, Boyce, in jail at Indianapolis, asserted: "They're trying to pin it on me. I'm not going to talk until I see my lawyer." The girl's body was found buried at the edge of the Harrison Hills Country Club Saturday and Boyce was arrested. Boyce is married and is the father of three small boys.

Police said that during questioning of golf course employee Boyce said he had seen the girl and that she had on red stockings. The officers reasoned that the only persons who knew she had on red stockings were the killer and those persons who placed her body in an ambulance. Boyce was not one of the latter.

BANK SHORT $125,000; HEAD PLEADS GUILTY AS EMBEZZLER

Adrian (Mich.) Man Tells Judge, "I Tried to Get Money Faster Than I Should Have."

DETROIT, July 25 (AP).—Walter P. Jacobs, former Adrian (Mich.) bank president accused by Federal agents of responsibility for a fund shortage estimated at $125,000, pleaded guilty in Federal Court today to charges of embezzling and making false entries.

"I guess I tried to get money faster than I should have," Jacobs told Judge Frank A. Picard. "I lived beyond my means." Jacobs resigned as president of the National Bank of Adrian after the shortage was discovered. Judge Picard deferred sentencing until Monday.

GOLD RUSH IN MEXICO

Village of 20 Grows to 4000; Poor Peasants Average $500 a Day.

NOGALES, Sonora, Mexico, July 25 (AP).—Rich strikes have sent thousands of Mexicans to the gold field around Mesquite, which in recent weeks has been transformed from a tiny village of 20 persons into a boom town of 4000.

The gold field has been extended six miles from the spot where Francisco Arballo first struck pay dirt several weeks ago. Average daily production was estimated at 20 pounds by W. G. Greene, Cananea, mining executive.

Sonora peasants, thrilled at the story of Javier Gomez's good fortune, have joined the search for gold in droves, many of them taking their wives and children. Until recently, Gomez was a poor rancher. Now he averages $500 daily and has taken $7000 from his rich claim. Greene described the gold production as "incredible."

PART THREE.

STATE DIRECTOR SAYS THERE IS NO RELIEF CRISIS YET

"Everything in Hand at Present," Hayworth Asserts, "but It May Be Lull Before Storm."

STARK STILL SILENT ON WHAT HE'LL DO

Conference Set for Thursday—Observers Doubt That Special Session Will Be Called Soon.

By the Jefferson City Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, July 25. — On the eve of a conference between Gov. Lloyd C. Stark and the State Social Security Commission to discuss the relief situation in Missouri, due to inadequate appropriations by the 1939 Legislature, George I. Haworth, Administrator for the Commission, said today: "We have no relief crisis in the state at present."

The conference will be held at 10 o'clock Thursday afternoon, in the Governor's office. Haworth declared the relief situation over the State was "fairly well in hand," and said no particular complaints had been received from relief clients or the relief organization except in Washington County. An acute situation there, arising from 117 miners being temporarily deprived of a market for their mine, had been taken care of for the present, Haworth said. "It may be the lull before the storm," Haworth said, when asked what the situation would be later, with cold weather and diminishing relief funds, "but we have no crisis at present. We know our resources are not adequate, but the funds available are all that the Legislature allowed us, after we had submitted all of the facts and information to it."

Former State Senator Nick T. Cave of Columbia, chairman of the Social Security Commission, declined to comment today on possible moves by the commission concerning the relief situation, pending a conference with Gov. Stark. The Governor returned yesterday from a 16-day visit to the Pacific Coast, including the Golden Gate Exposition at San Francisco.

Stark Withholds Comment. Gov. Stark has declined to comment on the situation since his return, other than to say that the situation was as serious as had been indicated in the newspapers "something likely will have to be done. He declined to discuss the situation, or the possibility of convening a special session of the Legislature to provide additional funds, until he confers with the commission. "I have no idea what can be done," he said, "and will not have until I go into the matter."

While the Governor in recent weeks has refused to discuss prospects for a special session, it is the belief among observers here that it is not likely one will be called. It has for some time. The Governor declined yesterday to discuss even the speculation at the close of the Legislature, on June 24, that it might be necessary to call the Legislature back within a year, because of an inadequate relief appropriation.

Situation in St. Louis. Haworth, in discussing the St. Louis relief work, declared no particular complaints had been received from persons on relief, or from the St. Louis Social Security Board office, although newspapers have been pointing out the lack of funds. He said John K. Rowland, Social Security Administrator in St. Louis, was here yesterday and would be here today.

Haworth said complaints might develop later, pointing out that the reduction of about 50 per cent of relief allotments to the counties and St. Louis, because of inadequate funds, applied only to the last two weeks of this month.

The commission recently adopted a policy of spreading the money available over the rest of the biennial period of 1939-1940, and cut allotments about one-half. Under this policy in many instances the relief allowance per individual is $1 a week or less, for food, clothing, and other items of relief are sharply curtailed.

The Legislature appropriated $8,000,000 for relief during the biennial period of 1939-1940, which was recommended $9,000,000 which was the amount appropriated in 1937 and 1938. The commission had asked for $15,516,000 for 1939 and 1940 in the budget request to the last Legislature. The commission has about $10,000,000 of the current appropriation available for the rest of this biennium.

Members of the Social Security Commission are Cave, chairman; W. T. Martin of St. Louis, vice-chairman; Mrs. A. E. McElhoolan of St. Joseph, Wallace Crossley of Warrensburg and John J. Tiapek of St. Marys.

Farley in Role of Party Peacemaker Isn't Likely to Appease Either Side

Efforts May Cause Him to Become Target of Both — Many Democrats Expect Free-for-All at Convention.

WASHINGTON, July 25 (AP). — The efforts of Postmaster-General Farley to hold the Democratic Party together are pushing him into the spot of peacemaker where he is likely to become a target for both sides.

Thus far, there are no signs that he has pledged himself to any person for the 1940 presidential race. Many here wonder whether his week-end conference with President Roosevelt placed him among the group of third term advocates. Some politicians doubt that it did. Those who know Farley best said he had a fixed determination not to take sides until after he comes back from Europe in September. Certainly, they said, he would make no declaration favoring any candidate, or even of his own intentions, until Roosevelt has made a public announcement of what he intends to do.

For New Deal, Either Way. Farley returned from his cross-country tour several weeks ago with this idea in mind. All through that trip, he preached peace to the partisans, argued that whoever was the candidate in 1940 the Democrats must put a New Deal flag in his hand.

Ever since the intra-party dispute broke into the open in the primary campaign fights the President waged against those whom he called too conservative last year, Farley, as chairman of the Democratic National Committee, has been trying to conciliate the factions.

During the last few weeks, members of Congress and party officials from widely scattered sections of the country have poured into his office. Some of them came to tell their troubles. Others came to present their arguments why he should or should not take part in a third term drive. Many Democrats are beginning to think there is little hope for selection of a candidate who will please the two sides of the controversy. They think the wind-up will be a free-for-all on the floor of the next national convention. Others are still hopeful of settlement.

Roosevelt vs. Garner. The lines have formed about President Roosevelt on the one side and Vice-President Garner on the other. Other candidates and other politicians are largely measured by their relation to whether the man is in the Roosevelt camp or tenting with Garner.

Talk about Farley-to-President has sprung up to complicate the national chairman's position. It is not easy for a man to frown on such pleasant words.

His long allegiance to Roosevelt has kept him pretty well anchored in the New Deal harbor. But the appointment of Paul V. McNutt of Indiana as Security Administrator, in a spot which brought an immediate outcropping of presidential speculation, was regarded by many as a blow at Farley. For he had held a dislike for McNutt since the 1932 Democratic convention, when the Indiana delegation did not swing promptly to Roosevelt.

Politicians are wondering whether the appointment may have helped to push Farley toward the Garner line. He and the Texan have been close personal friends. Each has a deep liking for the other. He has been invited to join the Garnerites.

The belief prevails here, however, that the President's decision with regard to a third term is likely to be the factor which makes up Farley's mind which way to go.

WATERWAYS BLOC AMENDS RAIL BILL

House Bi-Partisan Group Puts Through Change to Preserve Rate Differential.

WASHINGTON, July 25 (AP). — Over administration opposition, the House tentatively wrote into the transportation bill today a provision to permit all carriers, with I. C. C. approval, to reduce their rates provided the rates remained "compensatory."

The amendment was proposed by Wadsworth (Rep., New York), and supported by a bi-partisan waterways bloc as a means of preserving a differential between rail and water haulage rates. It was adopted on a roller vote announced as 147 to 119, taken following a standing vote which showed 131 for the provision to 129 against it.

The House also approved an amendment proposed by Murdock (Dem., Utah), providing that nothing in the Wadsworth proposition should be construed as effecting the "long and short haul" clause. This had been a cause of concern to Western Congressmen.

The bipartisan bloc upset the plans of House leaders by forcing tentative approval of a series of amendments.

Direct Vote to Come. A direct House vote on regulating the water carriers, however, was yet to come. After a conference of administration lieutenants, Democratic Leader Rayburn said he might appeal to all members to stay on the floor in order to get a full expression of views.

Besides the water carriers' provision, the legislation would authorize the I. C. C. to investigate complaints of regional freight rate differentials on manufactured products, would repeal landmark statutes, and would authorize new RFC loans to railroads if private financing was unavailable.

In the first skirmish during yesterday's debate, the waterways bloc wrote into the bill an order that the commission follow a policy that Congress wants to preserve a national transportation system "by water, highway and rail, as well as other means."

Reductions for Farm Products. Chairman Jones of the House Agriculture Committee successfully sponsored a provision that farm commodities for export shall have the same rate reductions now available for manufactured products to be sent abroad.

Then, the members broadened the scope of the I. C. C. inquiry into freight rate differentials to include agricultural commodities and raw materials as well as manufactured products.

SCIENTIST CLOCKING INSECT WING-BEATS WITH FAST CAMERA

Fruit Fly Can Do 13,000 a Minute, Harvard Biologist Finds.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., July 25 (AP). — Winged insects with "crushing speeds" up to 350 wing-beats a second are making test flights before a high-speed camera to help a Harvard scientist study "this extraordinarily rapid physical exercise which has no counterpart at all among mammalian animals."

Declaring he already has clocked the wing-beats of insect streamliners from the tiny fruit fly to the bumble bee, Biologist Leigh E. Chadwick said he had made a start on a "broad investigation" of processes involved when the common housefly zooms out of its hanger.

Chadwick uses a photographic technique perfected by Prof. Harold E. Edgerton of Massachusetts Institute of Technology. Looking over the field of flyers in his laboratory speedway, Dr. Chadwick rated them about as follows:

- Drosophila, or fruit fly: Odds-on favorite. Can do 13,000 beats a minute. Walk-away on a hot day. Likes a crowd.
- Bumble bee: Has done 240 beats a second. May surprise you some times stop flying under experimental conditions.
- Houseflies: Often do 160 beats a second. Very shifty.
- Honey bee: A comer I pushed. Clocks at 160-220 beats in trials.
- Humming bird: Grandstander. Fifty beats. Will sag.
- Moths and butterflies: No bet. Lazy.
- Long shots: Wasps, dragon flies, cicadas, grasshoppers.

work by a legislative draftsman, but Senator Wheeler (Dem., Montana) of the Senate Committee on Interstate Commerce said a "set of standards" had been written into the measure governing the terms of any debt agreements.

The House previously had enacted a measure which not now in bankruptcy work out agreements with their creditors. The Senate imposed restrictions which would have limited the effect of the bill to the Baltimore & Ohio and Lehigh Valley railroads.

The agreement reached by the Conference Committee must be approved by both houses before it can go to President Roosevelt for signature.

Under the bill, 25 per cent of a road's creditors would be required to petition the Interstate Commerce Commission for authority to effect a debt adjustment plan and issue the necessary securities.

After the I. C. C. has been satisfied that standards set forth in the bill have been met, and after two-thirds of the creditors, including at least a majority of each class, have approved, a debt adjustment plan may be submitted to a Federal court.

The Court may then put it into effect after 75 per cent of the creditors, including 60 per cent of each class, has given assent.

WAGE-HOUR CHIEF QUESTIONED ABOUT LABOR AID REMARK

Tells House Committee He Has Not Let Assistance Influence Administration of Law.

WASHINGTON, July 25 (AP). — Elmer F. Andrews, wage-hour administrator, told the House Rules Committee today that his recent tribute to labor's "swell job" of assisting him did not mean he had adopted a policy of being governed by organized labor in his administration of the law.

Andrews made the statement during testimony on the application of the House to consider his wage-hour amendments. These were designed chiefly to grant broad exemptions for workers engaged in processing agricultural products.

Representative Barden (Dem., North Carolina) for clearance for the House to consider his wage-hour amendments. These were designed chiefly to grant broad exemptions for workers engaged in processing agricultural products.

Andrews explained that with reference to the "white collar" workers he had changed his mind merely concerning the method. He said house Electric Company's "company union," among others, had demonstrated to him that basing exemptions for "white collar" workers on a monthly salary limit would discriminate against the older workers.

"Because older workers get more money because they have been longer in service, they would be denied the benefits of the law's overtime provisions," he said. "I think it would be better to handle this question by placing a monthly limitation rather than the present weekly one on their hours."

Barden disclaimed any desire to "destroy" the wage-hour law, but said there was widespread demand for changes in it. He said Andrews had admitted the agricultural section of the law was unfair and incapable of equitable administration, and he quoted Andrews as to the difficulties of determining the "area of production" on which exemptions for agricultural processing workers is based.

Every agricultural organization in the country was behind his amendments, he said. "When this bill was in (the labor) committee," said Barden, "not one single witness representing agriculture was permitted to speak, but Andrews and his men had everything to say."

"Meaner Than Wagner Act." During his questioning of Andrews, Cox remarked that the wages and hours law "is meaner than the Wagner Act, but not so meanly administered."

Andrews said many difficulties were still on intimate terms.

Minton's Comment. Senator Minton (Dem., Indiana), a supporter of Paul V. McNutt for the Democratic nomination, told reporters the conference "shows that Jim is going along" with the President for the 1940 campaign.

Minton said that while it was his "own private belief" that the President does not want a third term, he thought "Jim would support him for one" if the issue arose.

Another administration supporter.

TAFT EXPECTED TO DECLARE FOR PRESIDENCY SOON

Friends Say He Will Make Statement So Ohio G. O. P. Delegates May List Preferences.

WASHINGTON, July 25 (AP). — Close friends of Senator Taft (Rep., Ohio), said today he soon would make a definite statement of his willingness to stand for the Republican presidential nomination in 1940.

The statement may come, they disclosed, in a letter to supporters in Ohio authorizing them to seek election as Taft-pledged delegates to the party's convention.

Under the Ohio system, an individual cannot run for delegate unless he lists his first and second choices for the presidential nomination and accompanies them with written authorization from the designated men.

It was reported authoritatively that Taft would include in his statement his views on national problems. Senator Vandenberg (Rep., Michigan), did that in a recent letter which was interpreted widely as indicating his receptiveness to the Republican presidential nomination.

Vandenberg said the next President should be pre-pledged to serve only one term. There was no indication as to whether Taft would approve that idea.

Taft Defines Liberalism. Taft told reporters last December, a month after his election to the Senate, that he believed the Republicans should nominate a "liberal" in 1940, "if by liberal you mean a man who wants to improve conditions and who is willing to accept changes."

Political talk in the Capitol's Democratic cloakrooms centered today on the week-end conference between President Roosevelt and Democratic Chairman Farley. Several Senators contended the conversation had placed Farley behind the President for the 1940 campaign.

With Farley standing nearby, Roosevelt told reporters at Hyde Park yesterday the meeting had been just another in a succession which the two had been having since 1928. He said the talks had been fairly effective and would continue to be so.

The latter statement was interpreted by some politicians here to mean that Farley and the Chief Executive were still on intimate terms.

Governor and Wife Back Home

GOVERNOR AND MRS. STARK GREETED BY THEIR TWO CHILDREN, MOLLY AND KATHIE, ON their arrival in Jefferson City from the Pacific Coast.

er, Senator Guffey (Dem., Pennsylvania), asserted: "I don't think there has ever been a breach between the President and Jim and I don't think there ever will be one." From a Republican, Senator Bridges of New Hampshire, came a statement that Farley "apparently acceded again to the Roosevelt charm."

240 BRITISH BOMBERS MAKE MASS FLIGHT OVER FRANCE

Routes Cover Paris, Lyon and Bay of Biscay in Latest Show of Aerial Strength.

LONDON, July 25 (AP). — Great Britain continued its display of aerial strength today when 240 Royal Air Force heavy and medium bombing planes joined in the greatest mass flight in the history of British aviation.

As the last wave of 42 Hampden bombers was crossing the English Channel for exercises over France, a first wave of 60 Blenheims was landing back in England after completing a round trip of about 750 miles in about three hours. The Air Ministry estimated 1100 to 1200 officers and men took part.

The routes taken covered such widely separated areas as Paris, Lyons, the southeastern corner of the Bay of Biscay and the Gulf of Lions. Throughout the journey over France the British planes were intercepted by French fighters and reconnaissance craft.

In the 101st Royal Air Force fatal accident since Jan. 1, three crew members were killed last night when a battle plane on a night patrol flight crashed and burned in Norfolk. The number of deaths since Jan. 1 was increased to 170.

ARGENTINES DISPUTE U. S. ANTARCTIC CLAIM

Press Emphasizes Interest South American Nation Has in Region and Resources.

BUENOS AIRES, July 25 (AP). — Press emphasis on Argentine claims to sovereignty in certain Antarctic regions indicates that the Government may try to share in the Antarctic partition and possibly oppose any extension of the Monroe Doctrine to Antarctica.

There are signs that Argentina would take such steps in connection with participation in the Congress of Polar Explorers at Bergen, Norway, May to September, 1940. Foreign Ministry officials, however, have avoided making a direct statement.

With apparently inspired unanimity the newspapers La Nacion, Critica and La Prensa declared that Antarctica was naturally Argentine and displayed identical charts showing this country's interest in the area.

Among the arguments adduced were Argentina's proximity to the Antarctic, occupation of the South Orkney Islands where the southernmost observatory of the world has been erected and operated by Argentines, the assistance that Argentina has given to several distressed polar expeditions and a claim to the Falkland Islands, a British possession.

La Nacion declared editorially, "Our country's rights in the Antarctic must be protected" and added that "the United States again has voiced the Monroe Doctrine in connection with the new steps she has undertaken in the Antarctic. But this is an elastic formula which was appealed to when the United States took possession of the Hawaiian Islands, but the same was valueless when Britain took over the Falkland Islands."

"The interests at stake are no joke because in the Antarctic there is coal and probably oil and minerals. Further, we must look into the future for this is the shortest route between New Zealand and Australia and Argentina, and just as Russia is interested in establishing a short cut to the United States (aerially over the North Pole) we are equally interested in doing the same between the said countries of the Southern Hemisphere."

I know that my retirement will make no difference in its editorial principles; that it will always fight for progress and reform, never tolerate injustice or corruption, always fight demagogues of all parties, never belong to any party, always oppose privileged classes and public plunderers, never lack sympathy with the poor, always remain devoted to the public welfare, never be satisfied with merely printing news, always be drastically independent, never be afraid of attack, wrong, whether by predatory plutocracy or predatory poverty.

LETTERS FROM THE PEOPLE

Urges Small Homes for Slum Clearance.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

EVIDENTLY, great care will be exercised in selecting a site or sites for our local slum clearance project, but the fact that this low-cost housing program is expected to take shape in the form of multiple dwellings, possibly several stories high, insures that it will not help the blighted areas very much.

What St. Louis needs is clearance of the so-called blighted areas not only by the block, but by entire sections. Apartments should not even be given consideration. What St. Louis needs is more small homes, houses with two, three and four rooms, to suit the individual family, and with a yard for flowers, shrubs and trees. Houses of this type would give the working man a chance to own his own home, to assume responsibility and help build up the community morally and spiritually.

These homes should not cost more than $1500 or $2000, and much of the material in the houses to be razed could be used in their construction.

St. Louis needs more small homes and small home owners, not an overflow of apartments.

LITTLE SIR ECHO.

Condemns Isolationist Senators.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

IS it possible that a band of narrow-minded, convincing politicians can jeopardize the safety of the world simply to satisfy their own selfish aims?

I think that every newspaper in the country should denounce the Senators who prevented consideration of neutrality legislation at this session of Congress. They should have advocated complete acceptance of Secretary Hull's program, which will save humanity from catastrophe.

ONE U. S. CITIZEN.

The Country's Tax Authority.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

DR. EDWIN R. A. SELIGMAN, who died last week at the age of 78 at Lake Placid, made himself the country's outstanding authority in what is at once the dull and one of the most important fields of economic science—taxation.

For nearly a half-century, he conducted his professorship at Columbia University as a forum for searching thought on the tax problem in its various forms. He was the first to demonstrate that economic, social and administrative difficulties would cause the eventual decay of the general property tax.

When a Federal tax on incomes was still regarded as unconstitutional, Dr. Seligman found in incomes the best criterion of ability to pay. Equitable tax systems, Federal, state and local, are a long way from attainment, but the progress which has been made is due in no small measure to painstaking study of Dr. Seligman and his students.

As editor-in-chief of the Encyclopedia of the Social Sciences, his crowning work, he put his name to a monumental stock-taking of social knowledge over the world. His passing removes a practical scholar who had a large part in the transformation of economics from a philosophy to a science.

ALUMNUS.

Praises Post-Dispatch TVA Article.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

THE extensive and highly informative article published last Sunday, on the development, present status and future plans of the Federal Government's vast business venture in the Tennessee Valley, is an outstanding example of public service in newspaper work.

The excellent article would not have been complete without the comments of that giant of sanity and good will, Senator George W. Norris—a man this nation should be thankful to have. It is complete without plucking the essential part played by Franklin D. Roosevelt both before and after he became President.

KIRKWOOD. ROSCOE NUNN.

Would End Government Subsidies.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

INSTITUTIONAL charity is the most virulent of all social diseases. At the present time, the Government at Washington is promoting social degeneracy by its wholesale charities. It is time to substitute justice for charity by abolishing special privileges, by putting an end to all agricultural subsidies, all protective tariffs and the payment of prices above those of the world market for gold, silver or any other commodity purchased by the Government.

HENRY WARE ALLEN, Wichita, Kan.

Says New WPA Rules Are Harsh.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

UNDER the new regulations recently passed by Congress, the WPA worker must spend about $1.20 per month more in carfare to put in his quota of hours. Last winter, in bad weather, we could hardly put in our 96 or 112 hours. How are we going to draw the so-called security wages this winter when we must put in 180 hours?

WPA WORKER.

On Violation of Truck Parking Law.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

THE city ordinance which went into effect last December, forbidding commercial trucks to park in residential districts for more than one hour, is certainly not being observed.

These trucks often park all day and night, even a week at a time, in some residential districts. Usually, they do not even have parking lights. Why pass such a law and then not enforce it?

PUMP-PRIMING—VERSION IV.

The frankly half-hearted attitude which even the Democrats in Congress take toward the administration's new $2,800,000,000 lending proposal is a fair indication of the nation's loss of confidence in pump-priming.

It is not necessary to search very far for the reasons for this lackadaisical attitude. While almost no one looks upon this fourth version of pump-priming as offering much promise of substantial or lasting recovery, it can be depended on to give a certain temporary stimulus. In the absence of any sounder program, therefore, Congress appears likely to pass the bill, although in drastically altered form.

By far the greater portion of the program is open to the objection that there is ample credit available already for such projects as would have a valid claim to Government loans. Consider, for example, the provision to set up a $500,000,000 corporation to purchase equipment for lease to the railroads. The railroads, it so happens, are doing very well selling equipment-trust certificates to buy their own rolling stock. The Missouri Pacific Railroad, which is in receivership, has just sold approximately $3,000,000 worth of equipment-trust certificates at a net interest rate of slightly less than 2½ per cent. This rate, we may note, was three-quarters of 1 per cent below the bid of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation.

Admittedly, the Government can make loans to the railroads which the banks cannot, but they are in general loans whose repayment is more or less doubtful. When members of the Senate Banking Committee asked Jesse Jones the conditions of the loans which the RFC has already made to the railroads, he responded, "Lots are in default." Asked what the RFC does about them, he replied, "Well, we pray."

It is not hard to see why the committee has cut the word "self-liquidating" out of the title of the new lending bill.

Although most of the lending program is open to obvious criticism, there are portions which deserve sympathetic attention. The proposal to give the Export-Import Bank an additional $100,000,000 to lend to foreign Governments, principally those of Central and South America, has merit.

These loans would follow the pattern of the recent advance of $50,000,000 in gold to Brazil for the establishment of a central bank. The object is to "unfreeze" credits with those countries and thus facilitate exports of our goods. The money would turn over many times. If losses were eventually sustained, the loans would still have justified themselves by stimulating the internal prosperity of this country and by affording a means of combating the attempt of the dictator Powers to effect an economic penetration of Latin America.

The proposal to make $500,000,000 available for agricultural rehabilitation loans and loans to enable tenant farmers to acquire land of their own also merits friendly consideration. If a feasible program can be worked out to make independent farmers of some of our disinherited agricultural population, it should pay dividends in strengthening the social fabric.

But of the lending program as a whole, it may be said that it reveals a misconception of the fundamental problem of recovery. There is no problem of tight credit, as there was, for example, when the RFC was set up in 1932. We have 50 billion dollars of idle bank deposits, and lendable excess reserves are capable of serving as a base for almost an equal amount of credit if it were needed.

We are witnessing a demonstration in the financial field of the old saying, "You can lead a horse to water, but you can't make him drink." The problem is not to provide credit but to provide conditions which will cause business and industry to lap up the ample credit which already exists.

This new lending bill does not do.

A STATE JOB, TOO.

Out of the frying pan into the fire. That is the way some of the comment in Washington appraises the probable effect of the Hatch bill's limitations on political activity of Federal officeholders. The reasoning is that taking Federal employees out of politics will not do much more than deliver politics into the laps of state officeholders and employees.

Obviously, this is not the intention of Senator Hatch. Or of a Senate which approved the bill without a negative vote, or of the House which passed it by an overwhelming majority. Supporters of the Hatch bill unquestionably would like to have its restrictions against vote gathering by Federal employees apply to state employees as well. But under our Federal system, Congress has no authority to include state employees in its regulations. The states themselves must do that.

And in truth they must. In a federal union there are jobs which the national government can do. There are others which the states can do. But there are some which can be accomplished only when both work together. The cleanout of spoils and party politics from the public personnel is one of the most important jobs, requiring joint endeavor.

Senator Vandenberg of Michigan is now astride the elephant's back. For an ingratiating minute he had one leg over the donkey.

CHAMBERLAIN EAST AND WEST.

The appeasement policy, which Prime Minister Chamberlain publicly abandoned as a failure some four months ago, has been trotted out again on two major fronts of the Empire. It is working openly in the Orient, and under cover in the West.

By announcing that Britain will do nothing to prejudice fulfillment of Japan's "special requirements" in China, Chamberlain virtually approves the conquest and turns his back on the treaty violations involved. He says it does not mean recognition, but Tokyo hails the move as a "sweeping diplomatic victory," and the next thing to a grant of belligerent rights. So Chinese sovereignty joins Czech-Slovak rights as a sacrifice to maintenance of "peace for our time."

On the European front comes Chamberlain's confession that a Cabinet officer and a Nazi emissary have discussed "financial steps" for helping Germany, though he denies that any such thing as a loan now is under consideration. His announcement has a hollow ring after the vigorous and indignant denial with which the Foreign Office responded to reports of peace-loan negotiations.

What, we wonder, are British taxpayers thinking about these days? They bear a tremendous burden to pay for armaments to resist the Nazi threat, and now their Government is seemingly toying with a plan to relieve their pockets of a billion pounds as a reward for the potential aggressor. Chamberlain has told the people that Britons are subjected to "intolerable" insults at Tientsin, and now he hands a rare concession to the author of those insults.

The new developments should be either the decisive test for the appeasement policy—or the last straw for the British public.

ACTION, GOVERNOR, ACTION!

Gov. Stark is back in Jefferson City. He is disturbed by press reports about the relief situation. If it is as serious as indicated, he is quoted, "something likely will have to be done." He is to discuss the question with the Social Security Commission.

The commission will, we are confident, assure the Governor that the press has not exaggerated the gravity of the situation. Speaking for St. Louis, the press reports have been restrained. For proof of that, Gov. Stark does not have to consult the members of the Social Security Commission or anyone else. He has only to look at the miserably inadequate provision allowed by the commission for the children and unemployed on this city's relief rolls.

The Governor's comment is, we regret to say, disappointing. "Something likely will have to be done" is not the forthright language of the man who fought the Pendergast machine and licked it to a frazzle. No such pale, insipid words as "likely" garnished the Governor's exchanges with the Kansas City corruptionists. Then it was the twentieth-century voice of Cato. "Carthage must be destroyed." Bossism must go. In one sentence of ringing finality, for example, the Governor virtually ousted a delinquent Prosecuting Attorney. It was the speech of Missourians. It was straight-from-the-shoulder stuff.

The tragedy of relief demands the same crusading quality, the same resolution, the same "categorical imperative," the same first-class fighting spirit which Gov. Stark flashily revealed in his battle with the Pendergast machine.

Since the police bill was passed, on June 13, Gov. Stark has been away from Missouri the greater part of the time. He has been away too much. Does he sense a new, a critical, note in the political atmosphere of his State? That note is audible. The Governor has personal and party friends who can so advise him.

No public remains constant to an absentee. It's the man who stays on the job that holds the crowd.

Gov. Stark has a job of paramount importance to do. He, and nobody else, can tell the State Social Security Commission to do what in the name of humanity must be done. Decent provision must be made for the poor of St. Louis from the Social Security Commission's funds. If the Governor commands, the commission will obey.

The relief situation is desperate. It has got to be corrected. Corrected temporarily by executive order. Corrected permanently by bringing the Legislature back to repair its sin of omission.

The Governor at his desk, in his best driving form, the Governor who resurrected the office from an observation post to a pinnacle of leadership—

That is what Missouri is expecting and demanding of Lloyd Stark.

GOOD AND HEALTHY.

"Not too bright, you know, but good and healthy." Chief of Police Glasco speaking. He is referring to the able-bodied policeman who applied for Government compensation as a disabled war veteran and so precipitated the investigation of such cases on the St. Louis force. The inquiry disclosed that 38 physically fit policemen either are receiving or have at some time received compensation for alleged unfitness; however, the Chief will not give out their names—it is their privilege, says he, and nobody else's business—and he means to shield them from publicity because it would never do to have children running after an officer and crying, "Chisejer!"

The names should be published. In all probability, the men should be fired. The Chief's stand is "not too bright" and the putative conduct of the children on the beat would be "good and healthy."

TO OUTLAW LABOR SPYING.

A lot of dirty practices were uncovered by the La Follette Civil Liberties Committee. None ranked lower, however, than those which certain employers in industry used to harass and block organized labor in its attempt to achieve freedom in collective bargaining. During the senatorial hearings, shocking disclosures of labor spies, planted stool pigeons, professional strike breakers, criminal strike guards and the arms traffic in labor trouble were in the news day after day.

All this needs to be remembered as we read that the Senate Labor Committee has recommended the enactment of a law to bar "malignant labor practices." Legislation asked would not only outlaw the interstate transportation of goods produced in the shadow of espionage and strike-breaking by thugs, it would prohibit the Government from entering into contracts with companies using such practices.

This proposal is aimed at the elimination of a hangover from feudalism. Men have a right to work without the fear that the fellow at the next bench is planted there to carry tales to the foreman. They have the right to strike against just grievances without the threat that their places will be taken by professional thugs and gunmen, imported to break the strike. They have a right to protection by the Government against a vicious trade in bombs, sawed-off shotguns and submachine guns.

A congressional investigation serves only part of its purpose when it reveals conditions which need to be corrected. Correction must follow. The Labor Committee has made a recommendation which Congress should be prompt in accepting.

THE THESPIANS TURN TO BARTER.

An ingenious and enterprising actor-producer named Robert Porterfield has found a way to bring the professional theater back in the small town. Gathering together some 80 New York actors, he has opened at Abingdon, in the lovely mountain section of Virginia, a "Barter Theater." The people of the town and countryside flock in to purchase tickets with eggs, onions, potatoes, a home-cured ham or anything of which they may have a surplus. The scheme has been in operation long enough already to prove it can be worked with success.

Here may be the perfect answer for the actors thrown out of work by the closing of the WPA theater projects. It must be about as exciting an experience as any the profession has had to offer since Thespians began wandering about Attica in a cart, training his chorus and giving his show in whatever village exhibited an interest.

NOW YOU SEE IT AND NOW YOU DON'T.

Vandenberg's Suggestion on Japan

The Mirror of Public Opinion

Michigan Senator's plan for nine-Power parity is opposed by New York daily because it means six-month delay in halting sale of arms to aggressor in Orient; urges action at once if it is to be taken; would serve notice on treaty violations and demand a showdown.

From the New York Herald Tribune.

SENATOR ARTHUR VANDENBERG'S suggestion of another nine-Power conference, to pass judgment on Japan, together with a new Japanese-American commercial treaty or some futile gestures in that direction (for which six months' notice is required), will be a great comfort to the Japanese army in China.

It will also be reassuring to those American firms that are selling Japan nearly $160,000,000 worth of petroleum products, scrap iron, copper, machine tools, motor vehicles, internal combustion engines and other supplies essential to that army's adventure in China. It will be equally disheartening to the great body of Americans who would like to take us out of "partnership" with that army in that savage adventure.

Senator Vandenberg's suggestions would postpone all effective action to these ends for at least six months from the date that Congress approved his plan. Even assuming that immediate approval is likely, six months is too long. A steady supply of American materials over that period would probably insure the bombing of several dozen more American mission properties, the killing and maiming of 100,000 Chinese civilians, more or less, and the extirpation of such commerce with China as is now left to us.

Senator Key Pittman, on July 14, had the tracks cleared for the submission to his Committee on Foreign Relations of an embargo upon the export of essential war supplies to Japan. Nothing happened because, as it was explained to the correspondents, someone reminded the committee that this country's commercial treaty with Japan of 1911 specifically bans trade restrictions that would apply to Japan only. The party that would like to revise or denounce the treaty must, moreover, give the other six months' notice.

Nothing has been heard of the Pittman embargo measure since this obstacle to it was discovered, and Senator Vandenberg's suggestions will now be interpreted by the Japanese and all others as a confession from the Senate that—except for a breach of regulations, which Senator Vandenberg says he is unwilling to contemplate—there is nothing more that can be done about it until the treaty of 1911 is out of the way.

Apart from the fact that such an embargo as Senator Pittman proposed is a war measure, not at all short of war, and should, therefore, precede the breach of relations which it would certainly provoke, this treaty ban on trade discrimination puts it outside Congress' field of discussion.

To put it tritely, two wrongs do not make a right, and however flimsy Japan's excuses for her flagrant treaty violations may be, this country cannot balance the score by descending to Japan's level and by proclaiming that its moral obligations to the Chinese are more important than its treaty pledges to Japan.

At the same time, we cannot see what possible advantage there would be in another convention of the parties to the nine-Power Treaty, except as a device for keeping the question of Japan's delinquencies alive, pending the expiration of the commercial treaty. This the Japanese army can be trusted to do for us. Japan would again refuse to participate in such a convention; and no decision reached in her absence would have the slightest effect on her policies.

No other nation needs to be told that Japan has violated the letter and denounced the spirit of every clause in the nine-Power Treaty, and this country does not need the moral support of any other nation to say just that to Japan. Furthermore, there is no good reason to wait six months before getting a treaty out of the way, if the reason for removing that obstacle to action is to impose an embargo on war supplies to Japan at the end of six months.

Such an embargo would invite from Japan's armed forces, if not from her Government, retaliatory measures—particularly against Americans in China—that would arouse white-hot indignation in this country and result very shortly in the breach of relations which Senator Vandenberg says that he does not now want.

But why not now? If Japan's conduct justifies a roundabout course of action that would provoke a withdrawal of recognition from her Government after she had stocked up with American war materials for half a year or more, why does it not warrant a diplomatic showdown with her now?

Let us present Japan with an itemized account of treaty violations and tell her that if she cannot immediately demonstrate that she is willing and able to execute treaty pledges, we shall consider further diplomatic relations with her a superfluous extravagance. It should be as simple as that. If there is no precedent for such simplicity in diplomacy, the time has come to make one.

Iowa Has a Marriage Mill, Too

From the Dubuque (Ia.) Telegraph-Herald.

THESE have been record-making days for the Dubuque marriage mill. Every week end seems to set a new top for the number of couples crossing the line from Illinois to be married under Iowa laws, which do not require certain health precautions.

Other Iowa border towns are having the same experience. Missouri towns, too. The St. Louis Post-Dispatch notes that 35 per cent of those married last month "by George R. Hart and his marriage mill" are from adjoining states which require blood tests. The St. Louis paper adds that this should humiliate the following:

"First, the couples from Illinois and the other states who left their own communities in order to escape sensible requirements, enacted for their own protection.

"Second, the people of Missouri, who are put in the position of living in a state whose delinquency in the matter of marriage laws seriously interferes with the effectiveness of the sound laws of its neighbors.

"Third, the members of the Missouri Legislature, who have just closed the longest session in the State's history without passing the bills introduced to correct this very condition."

Substitute the word "Iowa" for "Missouri" in the three items above, even to the point about the Legislature, and you have an equally true statement. This was one piece of legislation for which there wasn't a semblance of reason for neglect.

Those Who Mine Tiff

From the Kansas City Journal.

MISSOURI'S tiff mining industry is a species of twentieth century feudalism, a disgrace to the State which harbors it. The current relief crisis among the impoverished miners is only an incidental manifestation of basic conditions which have fostered squalor, illiteracy and malnutrition.

The word "tiff" is a colloquialism for the mineral, barite, which is widely used as a paint pigment. It is found in shallow deposits on submarginal land. In the past, its mining in Missouri has been a family affair in which women and children participated. The miners marketed the results of a day's labor much the same as a Kansas farmer markets his butter and eggs.

Even when the industrial demand and the prices were favorable, the labor of entire families yielded a meager income. The tiff mining counties in southwestern Missouri have few schools, and their social conditions resemble those of the Southern share cropper.

The troubles of the tiff industry are typical of those of cotton and coal. The demand has fallen off, prices are down and machinery is being introduced to replace hand labor. The miners subsist on State relief.

At the best, relief is a negative way of approaching the problem, but now it is failing in its purpose of providing adequate food and shelter. Relief funds were curtailed by the recent Legislature. The miners complain that they receive canned grapefruit when their families need more substantial fare. The State Social Security Administrator says he will do the best he can. And so it goes—an old story.

The country has the choice of two policies in the problem of caring for those who, like the tiff miners and sharecroppers, are the victims of industrial trends. It can provide them with relief indefinitely, creating a relief class now and in future generations. Or it can pursue the more constructive and enlightened course of re-establishing the victimized families in new environments where they can become self-sustaining.

An attempt at the latter has been made by the Resettlement Administration. It has been handicapped by errors here and there, but the State Social Security Administrator says he will do the best he can. And so it goes—an old story.

How BLIND CRITICS HELP F. D. R. From the Minneapolis Star.

PROBABLY one of the reasons why President's popularity remains so constant throughout the country is the extremity to which bitter opponents of the New Deal go in their criticism.

When blatant indictments of everything F. D. R. has done issue from the mouths of these critics, the people whom he has tried to help are more inclined to accept F. D. R. and all his works than if there'd been no criticism in the first place.

The surest way to build up a man with the people is to condemn him in all-inclusive and indiscriminate terms. Criticism loses its validity when it is based on opposition and enmity alone.

NICKNAMING A TREE.

From the Boston Evening Transcript.

Says a news story: "Associates decided to honor Dean Hugo Winkewerder of the University of Washington School of Forestry. They planned his name on a tree of a new species of dogwood. It's the 'Cornus nuttallii Winkewerderi.'" If it's all right with you, we'll just call it "Dean."

FINE SINGING, COMEDY IN 'BARTERED BRIDE'

Municipal Theater Audience Again Relishes a Show of Grand Opera Grade.

THE BARTERED BRIDE, a comic opera in three acts. Music by Friedrich Smetana, libretto by Karel Sabina, English translation by Lubinka Bartusek. Presented by the Municipal Theater Association in Forest Park, with this cast: Krušina, a Peasant — Arthur Keen; Ludmila, His Wife — Dorothy Johnson; Marie, Their Daughter — Marie Dickson; Janek, a Landowner — Frederic Persson; Janek's Wife — Jane Rogers; Janek's Son — George Rasey; Janek, His Son by a For — Myron Taylor; Janek's Marriage — Eugene Lowenthal; Karel, the Village Marriage Broker — Joseph Vokos; Principal Comedian, Head of a Troupe of Strolling Actors — Joseph Vokos; Kamersida, a Member of the Troupe — Annamary Dickson; Indian, another Member of the Troupe — Al Downie.

Dancers: Nina Stroganova, Valva Valentínoff and Vladimir Dokoudovsky.

By COLVIN McPHERSON

THAT ever faithful individual, the true music-lover, who once each summer at Municipal Opera gets to hear a classic comedy sung by some of the best artists in the business, had his week now in Forest Park, in "The Bartered Bride."

The Friedrich Smetana success first presented in the park two years ago, was brought back last night, before an audience of 9000, and made as gratifying an impression as before. All who wish to luxuriate in melody and the splendid harmony of soloists, chorus and orchestra have a chance to do so in the next six nights of the run. All who have come to look upon a battery of microphones as an indispensable aid to singing should see the microphone put to its subservient mechanical place by this week's singers.

Two leading members of the cast—George Rasey and Eugene Lowenthal—were here in the 1937 production; two others—Marie Dickson and Myron Taylor—are new. Miss Dickson, who comes to St. Louis from Scotland by way of London's D'Oyly Carte Opera Company and the New York Metropolitan, is particularly suitable to the requirements of the role of Marie. Her voice has warmth and color, and is distinct in any part of the range. She is schooled in the art of the theater and not hard to look at, which is in itself something extraordinary in grand opera, or, until the Metropolitan started getting a Ziegfeld eye a few years ago, in any type of the Czech swain he plays.

But "The Bartered Bride" is a comic opera and the comic singer has the most to do. Rasey, who created the role of Krušina, the half-wit, for the Metropolitan revival of the Smetana opera in 1934, apparently has gone on developing the characterization beyond the point he had reached in 1937.

His playing shows more finesse than most of the art of the time, vaudeville buffoonery, and in it, indeed, has much in common with the highly skillful work of the Harpo Marx. Last night's audience applauded again and again merely to get the silly grin of acknowledgment that Rasey returned the singing voice that it is of course, far too good for such a role, a prodigality of nature, a surprise and a delight.

Almost as joyful an individual for the opera is Lowenthal, who created the role of the village broker, his voice, too, a valuable asset to the capering he does on the stage to promote a wedding between two Czech families.

It is the promotion of a wedding between the lovely Marie and the morose Krušina, with Janek in the background as the maiden's choice, that is the pattern of plot. Janek pulls a fast one, to use the modern idiom, marries the girl himself and even gets paid for it.

What makes this particular version of "The Bartered Bride" so acceptable to the modern audience is, along with its lively rhythm and plentiful melodies, the thoroughly jazz-age translation of Lubinka Bartusek. Miss Bartusek, who was in the audience last night, has not hesitated to call a prettily "cutie" to speak of a situation as "hot-to-tasty" and the result is immediately captivating.

Municipal Opera's regular company supports the soloists in a satisfactory style. Several members, like Dorothy Johnson as Marie, Frederic Persson, win vocal honors in their own right. Dancers with Nina Stroganova, Valva Valentínoff and Vladimir Dokoudovsky in the foreground, give us show air of peasant festivity. Costumes and sets, less striking than two years ago, are still very colorful and eye-filling.

200,000 AT OUTDOOR CONCERT. Lily Pons, Soprano, Draws Crowd to Chicago Park.

CHICAGO, July 25 (AP)—Lily Pons, the diminutive soprano, attracted 200,000 persons to a free outdoor concert in Grant Park last night.

Park District officials said the number exceeded "by several thousand" the audience that heard her sing from the same bandstand in 1937. One woman suffered severe fractured ribs when she was squeezed in the milling crowd.

At her first arrival, Mrs. Beatrice King, years old, took her seat at 7 a. m. The singer's husband, Andre Koslanetz, conducted the 85-piece orchestra.

FINE SINGING, COMEDY
IN 'BARTERED BRIDE'Municipal Theater Audience
Again Relishes a Show of Grand Opera Grade.

THE BARTERED BRIDE, a comic opera in three acts, music by Friedrich Smetana, libretto by Karel Sabina, English translation by Linuska Bartushek. Presented by the Municipal Theater Association in Forest Park, with this cast:

Krabak, a peasant — Arthur Kent
Ludmila, his wife — Dorothy Johnson
Marcel, their daughter — Muriel Dickson
Hans, a landowner — Frederic Persson
Jana, his wife — Jane Rogers
Jank, their son — George Rasely
Jank's mother — Myron Taylor
Jank's father — Eugene Loewenthal
Jank's grandfather — Joseph Vitale
Jank's grandmother — Annamary Dickey
Jank's uncle — Vladimir Dokoudovsky

BY COLVIN McPHERSON
The ever faithful individual, the true music-lover, who once each summer at Municipal Opera gets some of the best artists in the business, has his work now in Forest Park, in "The Bartered Bride."

The Friedrich Smetana success first presented in the park two years ago, was brought back last night, before an audience of 9000, and made as gratifying an impression as before. All who wish to luxuriate in melody and the splendid harmony of soloists, choruses and orchestra have a chance to do so in the next six nights of the run. All who have come to look upon a battery of microphones as an indispensable aid to singing should see the microphone put in its subservient mechanical place by this week's singers.

Two leading members of the cast—George Rasely and Eugene Loewenthal—were here in the 1937 production; two others—Muriel Dickson and Myron Taylor—are new to the Municipal Theater. To St. Louis from Scotland by way of London's D'Oyly Carte Opera Company and the New York Metropolitan, is particularly suitable to the requirements of the local theater.

Her voice has warmth and color and is heard in any part of her range. She is schooled in the arts of the theater and not hard to look at, which is in itself something extraordinary in grand opera, or was until the Metropolitan started getting a Ziegfeld eye a few years ago.

Mr. Rasely, who sings Jenik, is the grand opera type of actor, with a lyric tenor voice that he uses with skill and assurance. A big, hearty fellow, he is probably near to the type of the Czech swain he plays.

But "The Bartered Bride" is a comic opera and the comic singers have the most to do. Rasely, who created the role of Jenik, the peasant who is sold to the Metropolitain's rival of the Smetana opera in 1936, apparently has gone on developing the characterization beyond the point he had reached in 1937.

His playing shows more finesse, more of the art of the trained vaudeville buffoon or circus clown in it; indeed, has much in common with the highly skillful work of Harpo Marx. Last night's audience applauded again and again merely to get the silliest grin of acknowledgment that Rasely returned. The singing value that goes with it is, of course, far too good for such a role, a prodigality of nature, a surprise and a delight.

Almost as joyful an individual for the opera is Loewenthal, the scarecrow of a marriage broker. His voice, too, far outvalues the capering he does on the stage, to promote a wedding between two such families.

It is the promotion of a wedding between the lovely Marie and the economic Vashek, with Jenik in the background as the maiden's choice, that is the pattern of plot. Jenik kills a fast one, to use the modern slang, marries the girl himself and then gets paid for it.

What makes this particular version of "The Bartered Bride" so acceptable to the modern audience is, along with its lively rhythms and plentiful melodies, the thoroughly jazz-age translation of Linuska Bartushek. Miss Bartushek, who was in the audience last night, has not hesitated to call a pretty girl a "cutie" or to speak of a situation as "hot-as-toties" and the result is immediately captivating.

Municipal Opera's regular company supports the production in a satisfactory style. Several members, like Dorothy Johnson and Frederic Persson, win vocal honors in their own right. Dances, with Nina Stroganova, Valya Valentoff and Vladimir Dokoudovsky, give the show its air of peasant festivity. Costumes and sets, less striking than two years ago, are still very colorful and eye-filling.

NICKNAMING A TREE.
The Boston Evening Transcript, in a news story: "Associates decided to name Dean Hugo Winkewer of the University of Washington School of Forestry, pined his name on a tree of a new species of dogwood. It's the 'Cornus nuttallii winkewerii.' If it's all right with you, just call it 'Dean.'"

MISSOURI'S BUILDING PROGRAM COMPLETED

$100,000 of $10,000,000
ment at Prison.

JEFFERSON CITY, July 25 (AP).—Missouri's $17,000,000 building program was pronounced complete today, with enough funds left over for an additional $200,000 project to complete modernization of the State prison.

K. H. Middendorf, project engineer of the Public Works Administration, announced Federal approval of the 76 buildings erected or repaired during the five-year program and said:

"The people of Missouri are to be commended on their vision in authorizing the modernization of their elementary and correctional institutions and on the great value received for the expenditure made."

71 Buildings Involved.
Forty-one buildings at the State's eleemosynary institutions and 30 penal or correctional buildings were constructed or reconstructed as part of the program, which was financed by a State bond issue of $10,000,000, supplemented by PWA grants of $5,100,000 and by WPA labor.

Edgar M. Egan, executive secretary of the Bi-Partisan Advisory Board which supervised the work, said a balance of slightly more than $100,000 of State funds remained. He said he thought the State Building Commission would be notified in a few days that its application for matching Federal grants has been approved. He said the $200,000 would be used for power equipment at the State prison and its newly built auxiliary here.

Other New Buildings.
In addition to the auxiliary prison, psychiatric clinics were erected at State hospitals in St. Joseph, Fulton, Nevada and Farmington, and a medical center at the tuberculosis sanatorium at Mount Vernon.

New housing facilities also were created at Algon Retentionary, the prison, and the School for Feeble-Minded at Marshall. Educational facilities were added at the training school for boys at Booneville and the Industrial Home for Girls at Chillicothe.

The Advisory Board was headed by Sam E. Trimble, Springfield. Other members were Claude B. Ricketts, St. Louis; John D. McNeely, St. Joseph; Fred Nester, Cape Girardeau; Howard Cook, Jefferson City; and E. Bettis, Kansas City.

CHRISTIAN YOUTH CONFERENCE
PUTS BAR ON SENSATIONALISM

Amsterdam Session Seeks Co-operation of Press, "in View of International Situation."
AMSTERDAM, July 25 (AP).—Signs of these troubled times were reflected today at the world conference of Christian youth in an admonition against "sensationalism" in an appearance of partisanship in what comes out of the conference.

"In view of the international situation and in deference to the wishes of the Government," said a notice to the press, "the conference committee desires to avoid sensation or any appearance of partisanship and will appreciate collaboration of the press in this respect."

International relations was one of the most popular of seven discussion topics among the 1500 delegates, and the committee apparently was afraid the conferees might talk indiscreetly about what was said in closed sessions.

BAPTIST REPORT URGES ARMED WORLD COURT

Swedish Leader Says This Implies That Various Countries Reduce Armaments.

ATLANTA, Ga., July 25 (AP).—Baptists of 60 nations considered today the feasibility of a police, bulwarked international court as a guarantee against war.

A general session of the Sixth Baptist World Congress heard a report from Dr. N. J. Nordstrom of Stockholm, Sweden, then discussed peace proposals in the communication, drawn by a commission of the Baptist World Alliance.

Dr. Walter Oliver Lewis of Paris said he believed in "collective security" and termed as a "crucial period" in universal peace "from now until October 1940."

A native Missourian, he now is European representative of the Foreign Mission Society.

Urges Accord Between Nations.
Calling attention to the report's assertion most of the people of foreign countries did not want to fight each other, he urged constant efforts to cement understanding between nations.

Dr. Nordstrom said the international court suggestion presupposed that all nations should disarm down to the point of their inner needs, then the court should have military power to enforce its decisions.

"Whatever risks may be considered to accompany the submission of all international dispute to an international tribunal for decision, these risks are always less than those which the nations run by settling them through war," he said.

Dr. Nordstrom said he League of Nations was an earnest attempt at realizing the co-operative idea but added national egoism and political competition had limited results.

On Private War Industries.
Dr. Nordstrom directed an "earnest appeal" to all Governments to eliminate all private war industries of exercise such control over them as to exclude the possibility of private profit.

Of race discrimination he said: "It has increasingly appeared as a duty of Christians to give attention to this question and to seek to remove the tension and unrest which is caused by it in many parts of the world. . . . we look upon any race discrimination as sin."

The Rev. J. H. Rushbrooke of London became president of the alliance today with unanimous adoption of recommendations by the Nominating Committee. Dr. Rushbrooke succeeded Dr. George W. Truett of Dallas, Tex. The new general secretary is Dr. Lewis, who succeeds Dr. Rushbrooke.

LAVISH MAHARAJA WHO WED AMERICAN
CUTS HIS SPENDING

Ruler of Indore Saves $32,000 a Year on Household, Aids
His People.

INDORE, India, July 25 (AP).—The young and wealthy Oxford-educated Maharaja of Indore, who disclosed on March 28 his marriage to an American woman, announced today a drastic cut in his personal spending. The move was attributed to the influence of his bride.

The Maharaja, who was noted for lavish spending before his marriage to the former Mrs. Marguerite Lawler Brannan, a 30-year-old divorcee he had employed as a nurse, lopped $32,000 a year off his household expenses.

The announcement said the Maharaja "feels there is little justice in maintaining antiquated customs of pomp and pageantry when the pressing needs of poor people are not provided for."

The Maharaja's subjects protested in a strike May 25 against increased house and water taxes. However, since his marriage the Maharaja has built public recreation fields and provided other facilities for his people.

POLICE SEEK MISSING WOMAN AND $2194

Ice Cream Company Clerk and Cash Disappear at About Same Time.

Police are seeking a woman clerk for Velvet Freeze, Inc., ice cream stores, who disappeared yesterday noon at about the same time that $2194 in cash was reported missing from offices of the company at 3230 Gravois avenue.

A check at the residence address she had given the company disclosed she had not returned there. Police said she was the wife of a former convict and had often used a name other than the one given at work.

The money was missed by Mrs. Theresa V. Weckherlin, cashier, who had placed it in an unlocked safe while she went to a washroom before leaving for a bank.

On her return to the room she reported the money was gone. The loss represented week-end receipts from a chain of stores.

GIRL, 7, HIT BY AUTO SUNDAY IN WATERLOO, ILL., DIES HERE

Florence Horn of Herclanum, Ill., died Sunday morning at St. Anthony's Hospital Sunday night of injuries suffered earlier in the day when she was struck by an automobile in Waterloo, Ill., was reported by police yesterday.

Her father, Fred A. Horn, told police she was hit by a car driven by Arthur Marsh of Belleville when she ran into Illinois Highway 3 in Waterloo, where the Horn family had had its noonday meal.

She suffered internal injuries and fractures of the skull and right hip. An inquest will be held.

The actress gave her age as 28, the physician as 42. They will be married Aug. 6. Miss Gurie's interloper decree of divorce from her first husband, Thomas W. Stewart, a salesman, became final last week.

GOV. HORNER VETOES CHICAGO LOTTERY BILL

“Worthy Cause (Slum Clearance) Cannot Legalize Il-legal Means,” He Says.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., July 25 (AP).—Bills which would have created a State-supervised sweepstakes plan to finance Chicago slum clearance were vetoed by Gov. Horner today on the ground they were contrary to Illinois lottery laws.

“A worthy cause cannot legalize an illegal means,” the Governor said in his veto message. “No end justifies a palpable violation of the Constitution of this State.”

The bills would have created the Illinois Home Building Corporation and called for the sale of “memberships” to the public with monthly drawings to distribute 10 percent of the receipts to “officers” of the agency.

The plan sponsored by Representative Carmen Vacco (Dem.), Chicago, would have been under the supervision of the Illinois Housing Board and the State Director of Finance, Public Health and Public Works and Buildings.

Eighty-four percent of the lottery fund would have been used to build bungalows and two-flat buildings which the corporation would sell or rent. The remaining 6 percent would have been used for administration costs.

The bills provided that the ticket holder selected as “president” of the corporation each month would have received a “salary” of not more than $50,000.

Vacco called the plan a “practical way” to clear Chicago of slums. Originally the plan would have been Statewide in effect but was finally limited to Cook County.

The measures were attacked in both houses as “putting the State in the gambling business.”

SHARP REBOUND IN WHEAT PRICE; CORN AGAIN OFF

CHICAGO, July 25 (AP).—A revival in European demand for American wheat today helped the wheat market's recent decline.

Prices rose as much as 1 1/2 cents. Selling was renewed before the close, however, and half of the advance was wiped out.

Corn rose more than a cent with wheat but fell back below previous closing levels, most lows for the past six years.

Traders who were early season buyers unloaded before the rebound.

Small country offerings of wheat to domestic terminals and improved domestic milling demand helped to strengthen the market. Millers bought approximately 100,000 bushels.

Wheat closed 1/2 cent higher than yesterday, September 61 1/2¢. December 62 1/2¢. Corn, 34 1/2¢. Lower, September 34 1/2¢. December 35 1/2¢. Oats unchanged to 1/4¢ higher.

Exporters continued sales of approximately 1,000,000 bushels of wheat sold to European dealers who apparently were attracted by the unusually low price. Most of this was Canadian wheat, but some American grain in stores on the continent was sold. In addition, there were trade reports that sales of United States wheat already in Europe and new hard winter grain for August-September shipments from the Gulf to Argentina amounted to almost as much as the volume confirmed in the East.

With United States corn quoted under Argentine the first time in months in the Liverpool market, interest in foreign interest in corn also was in evidence.

Early gains seemed to be much as 1 1/2 cents, but these advances were shaded partially in later foreign dealings, although the market continued to have a firm undertone.

Some of the buying was associated with lifting of hedges on export sales estimated at around 1,000,000 bushels. Eastern export interests said that most of this business was done in Europe and it was assumed subsidy was in use, although this could not be confirmed. Traders here said that possibly some loan wheat now under government control may have been sold. Export sales of Canadian wheat also were estimated around 1,000,000 bushels.

The broader interest in North American wheat was attracted by unusually low prices. Some buying here also was of a technical nature, following the recent sharp break. Unimpaired strength at Liverpool, where prices rallied from an early fractional decline and showed corresponding gains, was attributed to rumors that the British Government is buying 50,000 bushels of Canadian wheat for emergency reserve and storing the grain in Canada.

Corn prices also advanced more than a cent, but later lost about half of this gain due to selling based on good overnight rains throughout the belt. Exporters reported some corn had been sold to importers and cables indicated United States corn was quoted under Argentine for the first time since early in 1937.

Some of the buying was associated with lifting of hedges on export sales estimated at around 1,000,000 bushels. Eastern export interests said that most of this business was done in Europe and it was assumed subsidy was in use, although this could not be confirmed. Traders here said that possibly some loan wheat now under government control may have been sold. Export sales of Canadian wheat also were estimated around 1,000,000 bushels.

WAGE-HOUR CHIEF QUESTIONED ABOUT LABOR AID REMARK

In administration were encountered because "we haven't enough men."

"Our reports indicate that industry and labor are co-operative," he said, "but pressure groups are active and the pressure groups should have got behind Chairman Norton's bill when the time was ripe."

Mrs. Norton's proposed amendments to the law excluded certain "white collar" workers, but did not embrace the broad field of agricultural processing workers covered by the Barden proposals.

Cox asked Andrews whether he was correctly quoted in saying there would be no amendments to the act at this session of Congress and demanded, "on what authority do you speak for Congress?"

"I said I hoped there would be no amendments," Andrews replied. "Are you opposed to the Barden agricultural amendments?" asked Cox.

"I don't believe the Barden bill affects agricultural workers," Andrews replied. "But it affects the industrial workers allied with agriculture. That's unfair."

DROUGHT IN EAST HURTS CROPS AND HAMPERS POWER PLANTS

Damage Reported in New England and New Jersey; Many Forest Fires in Pennsylvania.

NEW YORK, July 25 (AP).—Falling rivers threatened the water power of factories in lower New England today as the worst July drought in a generation in the north Atlantic area extended its crop havoc and increased the danger of forest fires.

In addition to Massachusetts, Connecticut and New Hampshire, water shortages also were reported in rural sections of New Jersey and central New England, where farmers were forced to haul water for stock and household use. Apple orchards, pastures and vegetable crops have been damaged. Many New England plants resorted to auxiliary power as the water supply for delivery was cut off.

In Pennsylvania, forest officials said more than 200 timber fires had broken out since the first of the month. In New York, officials indicated that State forests might be closed to the public unless the drought ends soon.

No general rainfall was forecast before the week-end.

GOV. OLSON VETOES BILL TO DENY RELIEF TO ALIENS

California Executive Says Measure Barring Non-Citizens Is "Un-American."

LOS ANGELES, July 25 (AP).—Gov. Culbert Olson vetoed a bill to deny relief funds to aliens because "it would be un-American to deny food and assistance to the residents and workers in this State, who, through neglect or no fault of their own have been unable to acquire citizenship."

"We have sent millions in relief contributions to all parts of the world," he said, "since when have Americans begun to regard it as no longer their moral responsibility to alleviate the distress of other human beings, regardless of race, creed, color or citizenship?"

Isadore Penn Probably Victim of Mistaken Identity.

Associated Press.

NEW YORK, July 25 (AP).—Five revolver shots, fired by two gunmen from a parked automobile, killed Isadore Penn, 42 years old, officer of a music publishing house, as he walked from his Bronx home to a subway stop.

Business associates of the victim said the shooting probably was a case of mistaken identity.

Before he died, Penn told detectives he had no enemies and was involved in no trouble.

DOCTOR'S ADVICE TO NEWLY-WEDS

The fashionable wedding was over. The bride and groom made a rush for their motor car to escape the rice and the rapping of their friends and were speeding away on their honeymoon. The ladies of the company remained to exchange greetings and express adulations over the beautiful ceremony, the loveliness of the bride and the brilliant future that awaits the newly-weds.

The father of the groom, a prominent Southern physician, wanders thoughtfully out into the corridor of the church where he meets a fellow physician, an old friend of the family. "Well, Doctor, your son is married and if he and his bride will keep all of the many vows that the minister made them promise, they should live most happily—for he made them promise nearly everything."

"But," said the wise old physician, "the minister overlooked the most important vow. 'What that, Doctor?' He should have made them promise that when either of them became fretful, grouchy, and bilious, the other would promptly administer Calatots, for," said he, "biliousness is the cause of more family trouble, misunderstandings, fights and divorces, than almost any other factor."

Note—This is a true story of a conversation between two physicians in the corridor of a fashionable church on Peachtree Street, Atlanta, Ga. (Printed as an advertisement by the makers of Calatots.)

Case Records of a PSYCHOLOGIST

By Dr. George W. Crane
Of Northwestern University

CASE M-173: Andrew K., aged 64, is a successful business man. "Do you want to know what I attribute my success?" he asked proudly. "Well, it's because I don't worship the past and go to my old cronies for information about the current market and fashions. I keep an ear to the ground. I think forward, instead of backwards, which is a mighty good motto. You explained it a year ago in your column and I felt like writing to you then and saying 'Amen.'"

"Do you remember what happened to Lot's wife because she looked backwards? Well, many of our educational and business firms are just about as sterile and stationary as Lot's wife because they worship the past, instead of planning for the future."

"I feel young, because I am looking into the tomorrows instead of the yesterdays. Don't you agree, Dr. Crane?"

DIAGNOSIS: Yes, sir, I agree. A reasonable study of the past is valuable if we obtain information and ideas thereby with which more ably to meet the problems of the future. But many people, like antique collectors, become so enamored of yesterday that they forget tomorrow almost entirely. Many of our college professors are so preoccupied with what has already happened, that they fail to prepare their graduates for what is going to occur.

They are what I call "epitaph polishers" and "tombstone dusters." They are simply educational archeologists, uncovering ruins of previous centuries, but forgetting that young men and women will marry, have children, need to earn a livelihood and learn how to get along happily with their fellow men. These major social problems are largely ignored even today in modern universities.

IN FACT, OUR college graduates march away from their senior commencement backwards, with eyes and faces toward the past. But happiness resides in the present and future. Business men are often guilty of this same fallacy. They gloat over their success and print pictures of their factories on the containers or packages when the public doesn't share the same delight in their autobiography. These business men are what I term the "Little Jack Horner" fellows. They cannot get over their own success, but must constantly pat themselves on the back.

One of our cereal manufacturers finally got over this juvenile complex, and printed pictures of circus animals on the cereal boxes. The children cleaned out the retail stock so fast that here in Chicago the stores temporarily ran out of this brand of cereal.

IF SPACE PERMITTED I could cite numerous examples where an apparently saturated market was suddenly stepped up by 100 or 200 percent by the simple expedient of making the package or carton of some value to the customer instead of using it to reflect the fatuous countenance of the manufacturer or a photograph of his factory. The quantity was not increased. The price was not reduced. The quality was not improved. But the container was made useful or valuable.

Consumer surveys are the keynote of modern psychology. Our Psychological Corporation has been conducting such valuable surveys bi-monthly for many years. If you want to walk into the future, don't march backwards!

Swimmers' Backstroke

By Johnny Weissmuller and Eleanor Holm

(This is the ninth in a series of articles on swimming by Johnny Weissmuller and Eleanor Holm.)

LESSON NINE.

WHEN we started to swim the crawl, we took up the kick before the arm motion. But since you use the crawl kick when you swim backstroke, too, we can save the backstroke kick until after the armstroke.

This lesson takes us out of the water again. Start with both hands resting gently against the thighs, palms at your sides. Begin with the right arm. Let it forward and upward, letting the arm bend at the elbow, so that its course makes an arc from your leg to a point where the arm is raised directly over your head, the elbow perfectly straight and rigid.

Then reach back and slightly to your right. Keep the arm straight and bring it around until it is back at your side. In doing this, keep your eyes straight ahead and do not turn your head. If you turn your head, your arm will swing too far behind you and the effect of the stroke will be wasted. Besides, the stroke will become very tiring. Try this with the other arm. Then work the two arms together so that they are moving in an even cycle. It is easy for you to tell when you are moving your arms correctly. The true motion is a smooth, easy one. If you are straining, there is something wrong. The chances are that you may be reaching directly behind you, rather than behind and to the side, as you should. That is easily corrected.

Frequent mention is made in the news dispatches of the heat in Washington, D. C., and how the members of Congress swelter rather than adjourn so long as there are important issues to face. A few weeks ago we published a declaration by Congressman Frisby in which he spoke touchingly of his suffering from the heat, and he likened his task to an ordeal by fire, and compared Washington to an inferno. He told how the insufferable heat melted the willpower, the determination of lesser men, until the very streets and gutters of the national capital ran with the butter of abandoned hopes.

We are in receipt of a postal card postmarked Washington, D. C.: The card says:

"Swelter, nothing! Do not let Horace Walpole DeEdme Frisby kid you. He and all the other scoundrels have air-cooled offices in air-cooled buildings, and law fabricators are air-cooled, too! What's the point of so many old statements to hospitals this time of year. They get out of their refrigerators and the heat starts their likker to fermenting all over again. Their metabolism facilities cannot accommodate. Consequently, they collapse."

Infant Unable To Adapt Self To Teamwork

Two-Year-Old Prefers to Play as Individual, Even With Small Companions.

By Angelo Patri

"MY little son, twenty-two months old, will not play nicely with his brother and sister, six and eight. They are good to him and try to get him to play with them but he fights them off and cries."

He would be likely to do just that because he cannot play with children so much beyond him in mental and physical development. He is not equipped for play with children on this age level. Nor can they play happily with him. All they can do with him is to treat him as a baby and make a toy of him, which is not satisfying in any sense.

A two-year-old child plays a good part of the time by himself if he has the right toys, and a pleasant place. He likes to have a friend or friends of about his own age close by, but the two, or the group, will be likely to play as individuals, each absorbed in his own scheme of enjoyment. Later on they will play together but the notion of every man for himself will still be strong in them. Teamwork comes after the children have emerged from infancy into childhood. Somewhere during the years between seven and 10 it begins to show.

In whatever stage of growth the children happen to be, they need playmates of their own age levels. In order to enjoy each other they must have about the same power. That means they must have had about the same experiences, too. The interests of children of the same age level are near enough to enable them to understand and to help each other. They cannot do this unless each cannot do his full share in the game. A two-year-old child cannot do this in play with a six-year-old, or an eight-year-old.

Children in early childhood, in the group between seven and ten, can get closer to one another than children who are two and six. The interest span must be closer together than this to allow real cooperation in spirit and in actuality. That is why one should not insist upon making the older brother or sister take the younger one along to play. Unless the children are close enough in age and experience to have the same powers and interests, they cannot play together with any advantage to either.

It is not fair to take the older brother or sister to play with the younger one along to play. Unless the children are close enough in age and experience to have the same powers and interests, they cannot play together with any advantage to either.

Making older children take their younger sisters and brothers along with them when they are going out to enjoy themselves does not make for brotherly or sisterly affection. When brother has to take sister, has to like it or not, sister has a feeling of failure, and brother has a feeling of outrage. Let each find his own way to be happy within it. That is all one can do in the end so it is just as well to do it in the beginning.

OPEN LETTER to GLAMOR GIRLS

As Candidates for Public Office, Debutantes Should Meet the Qualifications and Give Pledges—Chief Requisite Is to Be Photogenic.

By Inez Robb

NEW YORK, July 25. THE following open letter is addressed to Mary Steele, Patricia Plunkett, Barbara Earnshaw, Elizabeth Alexandra, Joan Davison, Katherine Wiman, Cynthia Hitler, Father Divine and the debutantes of the coming social season who have been mentioned as possible successors to Brenda Diana Duff Frazier for 1939-40. Diana, the glamor sensation of the past season, I have the retired, undefeated titleholder of 1938-39. To whom it may concern:

Dear Toots: With the onrush of the dog days or silliness season, I see by the papers that you are crowding me, that I have a right to come forward and question you on your candidacy, your qualifications for this pivotal post, and your campaign pledges if elected.

I see that you are among the nominees or candidates to succeed Brenda Frazier as the glamor girl of the coming debutante season. There are still old gaffers alive who can remember when a debutante was a private problem, not a public nuisance. I beg your pardon: I mean a public institution. In fact, I hear that the glamor title is of such wide public interest that a certain Mr. Gallup is contemplating a poll.

Since you are running for public office, I feel, as an American citizen and one of your hapless public, that I have a right to come forward and question you on your candidacy, your qualifications for this pivotal post, and your campaign pledges if elected.

In the first place: Are you photogenic? That's a big word with four syllables and probably not included in your finishing school curricula. But it means: Do your photograph well at all times? If not, include yourself out of the sweepstakes immediately. Unless you are photogenic, unless you flash as delectable in a newspaper flashlight shot taken at 5 a. m. as at a night club as in that $10,000 portrait by whichever English artist is currently the most fashionable, then it's no soap, no dice and no election for you.

Because the one paramount qualification of the glamor girl is to be photogenic. Don't kid yourself: if elected, it won't be because you're the people's choice. It's because you're the newspaper photographers' choice. Paste that plank in your hat and don't forget it. You don't have to be lovable, or have a sweet disposition or be fond of old people and animals, if only you look like a million bucks in candid camera shots.

You don't even have to be beautiful if you only photograph to create that illusion. None of your successors in the past have been beautiful. Eleanor Young, now Mrs. Robert Bacon, who in 1936-37 created the job you are seeking; Mimi Baker, now Mrs. Bob Topping, who won the crown in 1937-38 and Brenda, who went places with it in 1938-39, are at up the Stork Club at 4 a. m. and best only average pretty girls. But they photographed like angels, even when dunking a doughnut (Brenda).

Next, have you a hank of hair? Something which creates the effect of a wet mop, hanging loose and flowing across the shoulders and down the spine to about the eighth vertebra? This is an absolute essential, something possessed by all three titleholders in the past and now definitely established in the public mind—from coast to coast—as the badge and trade-mark of the glamor girl. This you must count in public as you lunch at Twenty-one or dine at the colony restaurant so that your next door neighbors rush pell mell to Child's where the patrons use the washrooms for revivifying.

Contrary to public opinion, you don't have to drink, not even champagne, unless you like an occasional glass. Titleholders in the past have been strongly addicted to soft drinks and milk.

Are you willing to forego all thought of a private life and to live at the Stork Club for weeks at a time, forsaking all others, even your aging parents? Will you mind being a goldfish? Will you like being an exhibitionist, or is extravert a prettier word? Do you execute the rumba, the samba and other acrobatic dances so well that all other dancers leave the floor to watch you and your partner perform?

How long can you go without sleep? Is 24 hours your limit, or 36 or 48? And at the end of these periods do you look fresh as a daisy, only fair, wan, tired or like a limp rag in photographs? (Check before you go.)

How are you at marathon dancing? Can you dance from tea time (5 p. m.) through the cocktail hour, through dinner, through a debutante supper dance, then close up the Stork Club at 4 a. m. and

Alpine Scene

By George Tucker

NEW YORK, July 25. I T was the first sweet cool of the evening, and though my eyes were still glassy and my temples throbbed with each jarring step, I made it past the Temple of Beauty, past the Headless Woman, past the Lady Frozen in Ice, on past the snow man guarding the Rheingold Inn gate, and sank into a chair on the rim of the ice rink. A waiter came up quietly and asked if I wanted anything. Under my breath I cursed him savagely, even though he was a kindly fellow and had done no wrong. He backed away and left me sitting there in the shadow of the papier-mache mountains.

Time passed, and after a while, which is to say in half an hour or so, my breathing became less labored. The glassiness went away from my stare, my temples ceased throbbing, and I was left merely exhausted. My recuperative powers were strong. Walking through several miles of fair on a hot day takes it out of you, but I came back fast.

Then I became aware that life had taken a turn for the better. Sweet music, in delicate sentences, accept, hung like romantic reminiscences in the half-twilight, and suddenly eight young girls came out on the ice. They weren't going anywhere in particular but they were traveling fast. They took the turns in eager graceful strides, evolved into pinwheels, swirled, danced away in pairs, came together in star formations, and finally, amid ringing applause, retired to a secret cave in the mountains.

Rheingold Inn is lost in a valley of the towering Swiss Alps. The Alps are papier-mache, it is true, but the impression of snow-capped peaks and wild, shaggy crags is there. Off to one side is the ski jump—a high, narrow precipitous lane, plunging down at a terrifying angle. At intervals two men and a girl climb to the summit, and at given signals, and on skis, come swooping down. They jump in the neighborhood of 70 feet—but not on snow. When they come down they land on waxed carpet, which is mercury itself.

After the show was over the girl ski-jumper, who was brunette and little more than an infant, was invited down by the orchestra leader to meet some friends. She climbed over the tuba player and accepted a seat at a table where four or five visitors sat gazing appropriately. And when the music started again, one of the young men wanted her to dance. But she declined. She thought she would look funny dancing in big square-toed shoes and the paraphernalia of a ski-jumper.

As I was by now in a more agreeable mood I glanced about for the waiter, and he was nice enough to bring me a tall glass of ice cream. We struck up a conversation, and then, being observant, he inquired after my general state, and asked me if I didn't have a headache.

"It doesn't ache much now," I told him, "but when I came in here it did."

"I thought so," he said, "I haven't any aspirin, but if you will loosen up the joints of your neck, I used to be an osteopath."

I looked at his great strong hands, and it seemed to me that he was just a little on the eager side.

"No, thanks," I said, "I think I will stay right here."

West's Opening Lead Is Cause For Argument

Chooses Four of Spades Instead of Ace of East's First Bid Suit.

By Ely Culbertson

IF average or "social" players think they have violent arguments with their partners, they should listen in on the vociferous debates of experts. Today's hand caused a near riot at a certain table in a recent duplicate game.

East, dealer. Both sides vulnerable. Match-point duplicate.

The bidding:

East 1 heart South West 2 hearts North 3 spades 5 clubs Double Pass

The bidding was a bit peculiar, but is reported exactly as made. West, for reasons best known to himself, chose to open the four of spades rather than the ace of East's first bid suit, hearts. It was this lead, and the implications it had for East, that caused the subsequent fight. Dummy played low and East, after profound thought, put up the ace and returned the deuce of spades. To East's horror, South discarded the jack of spades. After that, South lost only one club and two diamonds, and the 500 point penalty involved was not adequate reward to East-West for their abandoned game. Therefore, their match-point score on this board was not impressive.

It is hard to say who was the more bitter over this result, East or West. East maintained that he had seemed inconceivable that West should have opened a spade when holding five of them, in preference to a heart, which was East's first bid and in which suit West had only three cards. West, just as bitterly, said that he had had no assurance of East's holding the heart king, despite the fact that the suit had been bid first, and, therefore, that a spade lead from the queen had seemed just as constructive as a heart lead. East furthermore (West wanted to know) how could East have figured the spade lead a singleton, since in that case declarer would have had five spades?

East's answer to this seemed perfectly reasonable to me. He went down the following hand which from the bidding and all other evidence, especially including West's lead, had seemed a logical holding for West and declarer:

♠ K 10 6
♥ 7 4 3
♦ K 5 4
♣ Q 10 8 4

♠ A J 8 5
♥ 9 8 7 6 3
♣ A J 7 6 3

East pointed out that if this had been the situation, West would have bid exactly the same and, of course, would have opened the singleton four of spades. Moreover, that South's bidding would have been better in this case than his hand actually held. (South would not have been able to bid three spades, since he would know very well that East-West would go back to hearts.)

East pointed out that if the second hand actually were the case, any defense except the ace of spades would have made a return would give South his contract. A heart return, for example, would have ruffed, trumps drawn, and declarer would then finesse against the jack of spades and discard two of dummy's diamonds on his own best spades, eventually conceding only one diamond trick.

I must say that I am completely in accord with East's viewpoint. When partner has bid two suits and the opening leader selects the last one named, there is a tacit implication that he is making a short suit in that suit. In my opinion, West's opening lead was completely responsible for the debacle. The best ace was the proper lead.

Best Exercise

SWIMMING is the best all-around exercise. Its advantages are first, that it employs all muscles of the body; second, that it keeps the temperature down so that the heat generated by exercise is absorbed. Among its disadvantages is the fact that it is an acquired act. Most animals swim naturally. But in our artificial civilization we have to learn even an efficient method of this oldest of all instincts.

I am happy to see that Dr. Reed, in his book "Keep Like a Fish," published by the Little House, New York, Inc., swimming in the group of exercises that can be done by a person of 40 to 50.

Swimming is important also because it inculcates the three things that are so important in life: relaxation, timing and rhythm. Those who take it hard, it makes very exhausting. But when a stroke is learned, it becomes an exercise that can be carried on a long time without exhausting. They say that even the habitual slicer at golf will not be a tree in his left. The principle applies to swimming: you begin to learn it—the less you try, the less successful are. Your nervous system and muscular system are trained before you can become a true swimmer. When you do acquire a knack, you can get an abundance of healthful exercise from it.

The great obstacle to learning technique of swimming—fear of water—can be overcome by a simple, throwing a child into the water over his head. I can remember the very spot on Lake Huron where my older cousin carried me out. I was in to sink or swim. I was content to swim, conquering the fear of water in conquering everything else in the act of swimming shall be added unto you. In all other sports, or for exercise, you have to support your body weight. In swimming, the water supports the body, so that the water accomplishes, it is possible to prolong swimming

IF YOU ASK My OPINION

By MARTHA CARR

Dear Mrs. Carr: WAS married for a year. About two months ago I got a divorce. The problem is, I can't seem to get my ex-husband out of my mind. I have gone with him ever since my divorce. Now he is talking about our getting remarried in about a year. Mrs. Carr, I am afraid to take the chance. I gave him plenty of chances to make our marriage a success, but he wanted a divorce, wanted to go with other girls, in fact did go with other girls while we were still married. He never gave me a dime, the clothes I wore I worked for. I didn't mind working but I certainly did not get any thanks for it. Do you think we have a chance to make our marriage a success if we tried again? (I don't). How can one love a person yet know he is no good? Why do I want to marry him again? Please help me.

Letters intended for this column must be addressed to Martha Carr at the St. Louis Post-Dispatch. Mrs. Carr will answer all questions of general interest but, of course, cannot give advice on matters of a purely legal or medical nature. Those who do not care to have their letters published may enclose an addressed and stamped envelope for personal reply.

EX-MRS. R.

Certainly you have an experience that should be a warning and a lesson to you. I do not believe one can love a person one knows to be so disagreeable. I think that is just a form of unreasoning infatuation or a habit. You should try to get away and get a better perspective on your ex-husband.

Dear Mrs. Carr: I WOULD LIKE YOUR advice on furnishing a new home. We are building a 7-room Colonial. It is not elaborate. We want to be comfortable and homey, but I do want it furnished in good taste. I have an Oriental rug for my living room and had intended getting one for my dining room. An acquaintance remarked that she could not imagine Orientals in that type of house and considered it bad taste. My furniture is all new, of period design; is she right in her criticism, or shall I go on with my plans and feel that my house is in good taste? I have a beautiful white marble mantel.

COLONIAL GIRL.

Oriental rugs are hardly ever out of place in a well-furnished house and should be a proud possession. The outside architecture need not govern the inside furnishings of your house. I know of no arbitrary style governing the floor coverings of a Colonial house.

Dear Mrs. Carr: I AM A UNIVERSITY student preparing to study medicine, but in order to carry it is necessary that I obtain some kind of job to pay my tuition. I have tried unsuccessfully to find work. Everywhere one goes they demand experience. How is a fellow to get experience unless one gives him a chance to demonstrate his abilities? Perhaps I am handicapped in a way. While in high school I did not take a commercial course but a scientific one, with the intention of making science my life work. It seems that everywhere I go they ask me if I have had a commercial course, and when informed that I took a scientific one they say they are sorry but they have nothing. Perhaps my approach is wrong for I am sure it is not my appearance, and I can offer splendid references. Please advise what to do for my future depends upon my getting a job.

WORRIED.

If you are attending Washington or St. Louis University, you should consult the employment office at the former, the Dean of Men at the latter about finding student employment.

Dear Mrs. Carr: I HAVE THREE SISTERS. We were all born in England and when quite small were brought to America by our parents. Our father took out his first naturalization papers but we have just learned did not take out his second papers. We, his daughters, have all married Americans, does that make us citizens?

WORRIED.

If you want to become citizens you will have to be naturalized irrespective of your father's status and your husbands' unless you were married to an American citizen before Sept. 22, 1922. Inquire of Immigration and Naturalization Service, 1114 Market street, for procedure.

Best Exercise

By Logan Clendening, M. D.

SWIMMING is the best all-round exercise. Its advantages are, first, that it employs all the muscles of the body; second, that the water keeps the temperature down so that the excessive heat generated by exercise is absorbed. Among its disadvantages is the fact that it is an acquired activity. Most animals swim naturally. Man also would swim naturally if he remained a quadruped—that is, if he were content to swim dog-fashion. But in our artificial civilization we have to learn even an efficient method of this oldest of animal instincts.

I am happy to see that Dr. Dudley Reed, in his book "Keep Fit And Like It" (published by Whittey House, New York), includes swimming in the group of exercises that can be done by a person of 40 to 60.

Swimming is important also because it inculcates the three things that are so important in life—relaxation, timing and rhythm. For those who take it hard, it may be very exhausting. But when an easy stroke is learned, it becomes an exercise that can be carried on for a long time without exhaustion. They say that even the most habitual sinner at golf will hook if a tree is on his left. The same principle applies to swimming when you begin to learn it—the harder you try, the less successful you are. Your nervous system and your muscular system must be trained before you can become a graceful swimmer. When you do acquire the knack, you can get an abundance of beautiful exercise from the sport.

The great obstacle to learning the technique of swimming—fear of the water—can be overcome by what appears to be a cruel practice, namely, throwing a child into water over its head. I can remember the very spot on Lake Huron where my older cousin carried me out and dumped me in to sink or swim. After the fear of water is conquered, everything else in the act of swimming shall be added unto you.

In all other sports, or forms of exercise, you have to support your own body weight. In swimming the water supports the body. This, combined with the heat absorption that the water accomplishes, makes it possible to prolong swimming beyond any other form of exercise. This may, of course, be a danger: encouraging the swimmer to carry his exercise beyond the point of endurance. The real disadvantage of swimming is the possibility of infection of the nose and ears, or the eyes. Even pure water is an irritant to the mucous membrane of the nose and surface of the eyes. Any swimmer will come out of the water with the eyes more or less blood-shot. The nasal mucous membrane is more susceptible to catching cold after irritation by water. Sea water is less irritating than fresh water. Unquestionably a number of infections are picked up in even the best managed swimming pool. But all around, swimming is among the best of sports and the most healthy of exercises. Even if you are not an expert, you will reap rich rewards from any kind of performance. The swimming games add to the enjoyment of the exercises, especially in swimming pools. The setting of waves on seashores or lake shores is a splendid stimulant to the skin and also the heart and circulation.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

Mrs. F. H. "I have been thinking of taking a little girl for the summer. Her parents are very poor and cannot get for her the foods she should have. She has T. B. of the bone, has worn a cast for eight months and is now able to walk a little without it. I have three small children of my own and I want to be quite sure that I would not endanger their health in any way." Answer: You go right ahead and take her. That is contagious from human to human (only tuberculosis of the lungs from adult to child is contagious). And will you also allow me to take off my hat to you?

M. "Are there any other causes for reflexes in the eyes besides those listed? Bad tonsils, sinus infections, bad teeth, excessive drinking and smoking?" Answer: None of the conditions you name interfere with the normal eye reflexes. The causes of abnormal eye reflexes is the use of morphine or atropine, locomotor ataxia, paresis, iritis or brain tumor.

"HEIFETZ IS THE LEAST DEMONSTRATIVE OF ANY ARTIST I KNOW."

JASCHA HEIFETZ.

YEARS ago, when portable typewriters were more of a novelty than they are now, I carried one with me to France. On the way over, I showed it one day to the ship's purser, who had never before seen one. He examined it admiringly, exclaimed over its lightness and compactness, and finally relinquished it with a sigh, remarking regretfully, "but, of course, Monsieur, such a machine would be of little use to me. I never go anywhere!" I thought of that incident when Heifetz and I were discussing this sketch. "What about the biographical part of it?" I asked. "I wish you'd keep it short," he answered. "Just make it: 'Born in Russia, first lessons at three, debut in 1917.' That's all there is to say, really. About two lines." And so, obediently, I give you Jascha Heifetz's autobiography, exactly as dictated. In a way, he is right. That is about all there is to say. A man can run away to sea at an early age, work as a cook in a lumber camp, serve with the Foreign Legion, boss a railroad construction gang and lyot hot in here, isn't it? Upon which his companion remarked simply, "Not for pianists." I thought of that story as I sat in a projection room on the Goldwyn lot in Hollywood, one afternoon last May, watching and hearing Heifetz, who, like so many of the musicians, is fond of figuring, will tell you that up to now he has on the platform of a concert hall, playing Saint-Saens' "Introduction and Rondo Capriccioso" (a magazine in the violin. In the course of spending time he has been the way), and, in accordance with around the world four times and motion picture technique, shows has played in almost every country on the face of the globe; at 38 he has already traveled a distance equivalent to two round trips to the moon, and is well on the first leg of a third. Nevertheless, his career, stripped to its essentials, has inevitably been one of practice—travel—practice—travel—practice, with slight variations, year after year, for 31 years. The important things about him are not "where has been and how did he get there?" so much as "what has he done and who is he?" You know the short and simple answer to the first question. He has played the fiddle; played it in a manner that few men, living or dead, have ever equalled. Ranking artists is a silly business, and "the greatest in the world" is nothing more, in the last analysis, than an expression of somebody's opinion. But as far back as that fabulous twenty-seventh of October in 1917, when a slender, 17-year-old Russian boy first stepped on the stage of New York's Carnegie Hall, he knew that the ranks of the living masters of the violin had received another recruit. The most obvious aspect of his playing was, and still is, his incredible technical mastery, a mastery so complete that the lay listener becomes unconscious of it. It takes another violinist, I think, fully to appreciate Heifetz's technique, just as it takes an engineer to appreciate the silent perfection of a smoothly running piece of machinery. He is one of the comparatively few musical artists, even among the great ones, who can be described, somewhat inadequately, as "safe," the master craftsmen upon whom you can rely to accomplish, completely, whatever they set out to do. Once in a while you run across a singer to whom you can listen without wondering whether or not he is going to manage that tricky chromatic passage or whether she is going to hit that high B-flat; a pianist upon whom you can count not to muff that run in thirds; a horn player who, you know, isn't going to blow a bubble at the end of Siegfried's fanfare. Heifetz is one of those. "You may differ as to his interpretation of a given piece of music, but so far as concerns his ability to play it, you can settle back in your seat without misgivings. You can count on the crystal purity of his intonation, the perfection of his harmonies, the evenness of his tone, and the dazzling surety of his bowing. He will never let you down."

It is not coldness. What it is—let me come to that later. Whether or not his playing touches your heart is a matter of what you mean by "heart." Did you ever hear of "schmaltz"? It is a German word, meaning literally "grease," which has long been in the vocabulary of musicians. (Brahms is said to have used it in voicing his opinion of Mendelssohn's music.) They use it to describe singing or playing that insists upon buttering sentiment with sentimentality. The wailing of self-pity of a radio crooner "interpreting" the latest torch song; the greasily voluptuous tone of a self-styled "gypsy" restaurant violinist—these are "schmaltz." Now if there is one predominant element in Heifetz's playing it is complete absence of schmaltz. He never tries to drag out of a given piece of music more drama or emotion than there is in it. When the music demands it, he can give you a singing tone that is thrillingly beautiful; or, on the other hand, he can explain, in a few words, why he has an amazing variety of tone color at his command, and it is his subtle application of this color to the musical canvas, so to speak, that gives his playing its never-flagging variety and eloquence. One of the most familiar Heifetz anecdotes relates that after his first recital in London George Bernard Shaw visited him in his dressing room, and warned him against playing too perfectly. "Nothing may be perfect in this world," he said, "or the gods become jealous and destroy it. So would you mind playing one wrong note every night before you go to bed?" I have often thought of the appropriateness of Shaw's visit. For the styles of the two men, in their respective fields, are curiously alike. Shaw, to me, possesses the most nearly perfect literary style in the world, in that it approaches a complete absence of "style." He knows so wholly what he wants to say and says it with such clarity and simplicity, that his writing is like a sheet of flawless glass that allows the reader to look straight through the words to the ideas that they convey.

HEIFETZ'S playing is like that. At his hearing he plays with such a complete grasp of the meaning of the music, such effortless mastery of his instrument, that you tend to forget him. You are no longer hearing violin playing; you are hearing the music hearing it as the composer meant you to hear it, unconscious of any instrumental barrier between you. It is given to only a few artists in any generation to achieve this selfless perfection of communication; and Heifetz is one of those elect few. To give an idea of the man himself is not so easy, chiefly because he has so few eccentricities that would make picturesque reading. Two trivial memories of him may give you a vague picture of him. One is of a late party at Nya McMein's studio, back in '23. I think it was, when Jascha, about 4 in the morning, played as I have seldom heard him or anyone else play in concert. I told him so, and he explained, "I was using the Strad tonight, and she's never played so well as since I bought the Guarneri." You know, she's jealous!—and half believed it. The other is a recollection of Jascha, backstage at an absurd revue a crowd of us were putting on for charity—Jascha, with his music stand propped up in the wings, jostled by stage hands, tripped up by electric cables, nervous but determined, playing unaccompanied offstage music for a burlesque melodrama with the devotion and earnestness that he would have given to a command performance before royalty.

THERE, exemplified, are what to me are his two most striking characteristics: a simplicity and directness that are almost childlike, and a complete seriousness about his art. He gets along wonderfully with children. Not that he is a to that child; a gift from one artist head-patter. For all I know, he to another. Just now I mentioned the serious them. But he meets them on an equal footing, and they accept him as an equal. A children's orchestra more complete artistic integrity. He figures prominently in the story of "Music School" (an amazing aggregate of a benefit concert whose auditions, by the way, recruited and trained in Hollywood by a devoted old Russian musician named Peter el. Meremblem). When Heifetz first "School" he wore out even the fast and heard them on the screen tigue-proof studio crews with his he refused to believe that they were patient and tireless "Let's shoot doing the actual playing, and had that again." Nor have I ever to be taken to hear them in person before he could be convinced, show-off element in his make-up, or people with the same interests both on the boat and abroad. I do not dance but I shall certainly stay with them in the background. Answer: You will not need any evening clothes shall I need in touring in full. Regular Summer Visitors We never understand how or why, but sometimes in the warmer weather we discover ants in the bottom of our refrigerator. They can be gotten rid of very quickly by boiling water and then sprinkling whatever roach or bedbug preventive you use along the edge of the bottom shelf where the doors close. It will do away entirely with the pests.

Modern Fruit Freeze A milk punch that contains important vitamin D. This will make enough to serve six: Mix two cups of grapefruit juice with one cup of orange juice, one-third cup lemon juice and one-quarter cup granulated sugar. Chill two hours, or longer. Four into three cups of cold milk. Beat with an egg beater and pour immediately into tall, cold glasses. Drop in portions of pineapple or lemon sherbet. Dress up with red cherries and small pieces of candied orange or pineapple.

Spots on the Gas Stove Most of us housewives have found it a wise thing to wipe off any spilled food on the enamel of the gas stove as soon as the accident occurs. Then there is no scorching to be done and no drastic treatment that could injure the finish of the stove. It takes only a second to wipe off those spots and it pays to do it at once.

Tells Commons New In-

Sent to Moscow—Hop-to Make Statement Next Week.

LONDON, July 26 (AP). — The British Government has sent instructions to its diplomats in Moscow, Prime Minister Chamberlain told the House of Commons today. He added that he expected to make a statement early next week on the Moscow negotiations for a British-French-Russian mutual assistance pact. This announcement, coupled with optimistic reports in official circles, led to the belief that the Government hoped soon to be able to announce conclusion of the pact. Chamberlain would neither deny nor confirm reports from reliable sources that Britain and France had agreed to begin staff talks with Russia without waiting for conclusion of the projected pact. These quarters said British and French missions probably would leave for Moscow within 10 days. Asked whether it had been agreed that military and naval officers should go to Moscow for staff talks, Chamberlain replied: "We have sent certain instructions to Sir William Seeds (the Ambassador in Moscow), but I have not yet heard what the reaction is."

In response to another question, he said, "The French and the British Government are acting in collaboration."

Reported New Instructions. The new instructions sent Seeds, informed quarters said, were to agree to immediate staff talks since Russia has demanded this along, there was held to be little doubt that the proposal would be accepted.

The Government also was understood to have sent a new formula for defining "indirect aggression" as a chief point of difference between the British and Russian views. Great Britain and France are coming the laughing stock of the world "by their crawling on the ground" before Russia, German Propaganda Minister Goebbels' Berlin newspaper Der Angriff said today of the report that British and French military missions would go to Moscow.

"Not much has remained of the much-vaunted English dignity and French superiority," the paper continued. "It remains to be seen whether the pact will be concluded before Christmas or whether Moscow holdup will prove to be even more indigestible."

Questions on Tokyo Parley. On the British-Japanese agreement announced by Chamberlain Monday, in which Britain acknowledged that the Japanese army had "special requirements" for "maintaining public order" in the region of China under its control, Laborite Philip Noel-Baker asked: "May I ask whether the Japanese reply to the concessions made by the Tokyo formula has only been that they propose to take measures to restrict food supplies of Hong Kong and to arrest British officials of Shanghai?"

(A reference to the announcement Tuesday by Japanese authorities that they would close the Canton River above Hong Kong for two weeks and the arrest Tuesday of the British head of the health department of the Japanese-dominated Shanghai municipality.)

After opposition cries of "No answer," Chamberlain replied "No." Replying to questions by Laborites whether the Tokyo agreement precluded Britain from continuing to regard the Japanese Government as the government of all China from providing further financial assistance to the Chinese Government, Under-Secretary for Foreign Affairs Richard Austen Butler said:

"As the Prime Minister stated in the House on July 24, the declaration does not connote any change in the general policy of the British Government toward China." Answering another question, Butler said:
